Fight Coming

By Robert C. Albright

The House Banking Committee yesterday aimed another knock-out blow at the Administration's consumer subsidy program, reviving with watertight language practically the same legislation President Roosevelt vetoed earlier this year.

The committee approved the tightened subsidy prohibitions, 16 to 10, before reporting a bill extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corp. another 18 months. An amendment by Representative Wolcott (Republican) of Michigan, extending the ban on consumer payments to all Federal agencies. Eleven committee Republicans joined with one Progressive and four Democrats to clamp down the restrictions which Administration members charged would shoot living costs upward billions of dollars in one year. Ten Democrats voted "no."

Harbinger of Revolt

Harbinger of the second congressional subsidy revolt in four months, the bill was slated for House action in about 10 days. It was the first time, in fact, that the House Banking Committee had commanded enough votes to overthrow subsidies. The last move against subsidies was initiated on the House floor.

The bill gives the Government until December 31 of this year to liquidate existing consumer programs, limiting those to funds provided under existing law.

After voting the restrictions, the committee approved the bill extending CCC until June 30, 1945, by a vote of 23 to 3, but allowed the agency additional borrowing power to finance its operations. Ignored was a CCC request for another 500 million dollars.

"They don't need any more money," Chairman Steagall (Democrat) of Alabama told newsmen.

The bill flatly forbids fixing of ceilings for consumers at levels below support prices guaranteed farmers by CCC. The effect of this would be to force any ceiling prices set to at least the farm support price level.

It barred use of any Government

95,000 on the Books Draft Delinquents Face Induction After Nov. 1

(New manpower regulations, as they affect Federal workers, explained in Jerry Kluit's Federal Diary on Page B-1.)

By Ben W. Gilbert

Post Staff Writer

Selective Service yesterday ordered the country's 6500 local draft boards to reclassify into 1-A for immediate induction into the armed forces all draft delinquents aged 18 through 37 after November 1.

The action in effect set up a Nation-wide dragnet to catch an estimated 95,000 draft delinquents now on the books and send them into the armed services or make them stand trial for violation of the Selective Service Act.

Delinquents failing to respond to induction orders will be reported to the Department of Justice for arrest and prosecution. Violations of draft regulations may be punished by a maximum fine of $10,000 and five years in prison.

Selective Service defined draft delinquents as persons who had failed to keep the local board informed of an address where mail will always reach them and other variations of failing to keep in touch with local boards including:

Failure to return a completed Selective Service questionnaire within 10 days.

Giving false information in the questionnaire.

Failure to register.

Failure to report a change of status which would affect classification.

Failure to report for physical examination.

Failure to report for induction (or for work of national importance in the case of conscientious objectors).

Selective Service pointed out that it was setting up a continuing program designed to reduce the number of delinquents—in fairness to men in the armed forces and fathers about to be inducted. Previously, draft delinquency cases

Strong Peace Policy Group Asks Hearing

Senate advocates of a strong

Senate foreign policy declaration yesterday demanded a hearing before the full Senate Foreign Relations Committee before a compromise pronouncement on postwar peace objectives is reported to the Senate floor.

A series of conferences with other like-minded Senators on proposals to "clarify and strengthen" the subcommittee compromise meanwhile was arranged by sponsors of the specific, five-point Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill resolution.

Leaders of this bipartisan group were assured by Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally that they will have an opportunity to be heard on clarifying amendments before final action is taken, but Connally pleaded with them to drop their fight.

In a statement to the Senate, Chairman Connally in effect warned the so-called "B-2 H-2" group that the generally worded compromise "represents the best that they can hope to secure."

The former supporters of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill resolution should support the present resolution," said Connally. "If they should offer their resolution as an amendment and it should be rejected, there might be unfavorable reactions abroad."

But leaders of the group made it plain they will proceed with their fight "for a resolution that means something."

The minimum change they will

U. S. Divisions Rally Support In Fund Drive

As Coleman Jennings, chairman of the Community War Fund drive for $4,000,000, called upon campaign solicitors to boost the quota percentage raised from 12 to 100 per cent. Government division groups rallied support in sectional meetings yesterday.

Still other Federal agencies, including the Government Printing Office, Office of Property Custodian, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., and Federal Security Agency, scheduled campaign sessions for today.

Meanwhile, workers in this division, who are responsible for one-half of the Washington quota, learned that a play-by-play description of their pledges will feature their second report meeting in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing annex, 14th and C sts. nw., Monday noon.

Norman Brokenshire, WMAL announcer, will describe each contribution from the time it is turned in at the reception desk until it is audited, tabulated and deposited for the Community War Fund. He will also interview the workers making reports and broadcast totals and percentages as they are pledged.

On the floor of the bureau auditorium, 150 workers, equipped with adding machines and typewriters, compile the reports under the direction of James E. Councilor, fund auditor.

Brewster Trouble Laid To Labor Law

Federal Legislation Prevented Their 'Getting Tough,' Navy Witnesses Indicate

By Mary Spargo

Post Staff Writer

Hard-pressed Navy officials, fighting off charges of adopting an "umbrella policy" at the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. plants, yesterday indicated strongly that the whole structure of labor legislation and Government labor agencies had prevented their getting tough about production of bombers and fighters to prosecute the war.

This line of defense against a vigorously conducted attack by the House Naval Affairs subcommittee investigating Brewster's production was implicit in hours of testimony from ducking officials, who backed away from the issue as soon as they hit it.

Determined committee members, led by the quietly inflexible Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia, indicated that the conditions revealed at the Brewster plants were so shocking that the committee might launch an investigation into other plants holding Navy contracts.

Bird Summarizes Troubles

Assistant Secretary of the Navy

Ralph A. Bard led off in Navy's defense yesterday with a summary of the troubles involving plants guards at Brewster who were, and still are, members of both the Coast Guard Reserve (temporary) and members of the UAW-CIO union.

He was followed by Rear Admiral S. M. Kraus, general inspector of naval aircraft of the Eastern District. Comdr. Albert E. Dupuy, naval inspector of aircraft for the Brewster plants, and Comdr. W. Chaitin Wetherill, naval inspector of aircraft at Brewster's Johnsville plant, in an all day session that left Navy lieutenants who had expected to be called white around the gills.

Bard defended the Navy's action in ameliorating the initial court-martial sentence of four Coast Guard Reservists whose refusal to take posts assigned them caused a complete work stoppage at the Johnsville plant August 23. The men, he said, were acting under the backing of the UAW-CIO union, to which they belonged.

Notified Justice Department

Bard, in response to questioning by Representative Maas (Republican) of Minnesota, said that the Navy had reported the situation to the Department of Justice, with a view to seeing if prosecution could be instituted against those "who had incited members of the armed

Reds Smash 3 German Divisions In Breakthrough North of Kiev

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Oct. 15.—The Red army captured the Dnieper River bend stronghold of Zaporozhe yesterday, sealed off Melitopol for early conquest and cut its railway link with the Crimea, and in a new breakthrough north of Kiev smashed three German divisions, Moscow announced early today.

The fall of the east bank industrial citadel of Zaporozhe opened the way for a Soviet land slide southward into the Crimea, where 100,000 German troops risk encirclement. Front dispatches said Soviet units already were pursuing German remnants from the broken Zaporozhe-Melitopol line.

Nearly 10,000 Germans were slain as the Russians overwhelmed Zaporozhe's desperate Nazi garrison, and fought their way toward early triumph at Kiev, on the middle Dnieper, and Gomel in White Russia.

Tanks Lead Breakthrough

The Germans, still throwing their precious reserves into the inferno raging on both sides of Kiev, lost 3,000 men in one area there, 8,000 at Zaporozhe, 15,000 at Gomel and 20,000 at Melitopol, on the basis of preliminary data, said Moscow's midnight broadcast communique supplement, recorded by the Soviet monitor here.

"In the area north of Kiev," it added, "our tanks broke through German positions and smashed three enemy divisions."

Fighting their way over heaps of German dead, the Russians were closing in on Kiev, on the west bank of the middle Dnieper, from their bridgeheads established north and south of the capital, said the bulletin. Front dispatches said the Russians were smashing ahead in a furious effort to take Kiev before German dynamite squads had completed the wrecking of the city, already in flames.

The Soviet newspaper Red Star said the Germans still were trying to recapture the west bank Dnieper bridgeheads established by the Russians near Kiev, Pereyaslav and Kremenchuk, but said their efforts were doomed to failure by the increasing flow of Red army supplies and reinforcements across the river.

Shift of Nazi Troops Indicated

One German division shifted to the Kiev front was said to have been diverted from Leningrad, and some captured German prisoners were quoted as saying they had just reached the front from France.

Huge quantities of equipment were declared to have been abandoned by the Germans around Zaporozhe and inside that city which is near the site of the giant Dnieper Dam.

Marshal Joseph Stalin hailed the capture of Zaporozhe as one of the Allies Storm Forward Furious Night Assault Cracks River Defense

By Edward Kennedy

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 14.—The Germans' first natural defense line before Rome—the steep-banked Volturno River—has been smashed by the Fifth Army at several points near Capua in a furious night assault in which Allied engineers bridged the stream under withering German fire, Allied headquarters announced today.

American and British infantry and armored forces, including tanks, stormed across the river in darkness early yesterday after having repelled a futile Nazi assault on Capua, and today were fighting fiercely to expand their bridgeheads against desperate enemy resistance.

So murderous was the aerial cover given Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's attacking troops that German infantry was pinned down to its defensive positions north of the Volturno and not a single Nazi tank was able to join the battle. There was no exact information

Allied Headquarters, Southwest

Pacific, Friday, Oct. 15.—In a new raid on Kahili, Japan's chief air base on the last important enemy Solomon holdings of Bougainville, American planes have downed 12 of 25 intercepting Zeros in sky battles.

This announcement in today's communique added to the latest bag of enemy planes there. Yesterday's communique had reported the downing of 21 Japanese aircraft in the Bougainville sector.

Mitchell medium bombers swept above Bougainville and in attacks on shipping are believed to have sunk two enemy cargo vessels.

The Japanese air force made raids on Allied New Guinea positions at Morobe and Finschhafen.

The raids were characterized as harmless.

Army Getting Deadly New Superbombers

By Sterling F. Green

Associated Press Staff Writer

A new American super-bomber hauling more explosives and having vastly greater range than any existing warplane now is in actual production.

An unspecified number of the deadly new air giants has been delivered to the Army within the last several weeks.

An increased rate of output is scheduled for this month.

Dwarfing the Coaledated Liberator and Boeing Flying Fortress, the new dreadnaught of the sky is reckoned capable of bringing the innermost production centers of Hitler's European fortress and the Japanese Empire within the sights of United States bombardiers.

The plane has been identified as the B-29 by the Army weekly, Yank, in a recent article, which declared:

"A new super Fortress, the B-29, is being built, which will have a greater bomb capacity and longer range than any existing bomber."

Destroyers Buck And Bristol Sunk In Mediterranean

Loss of two American destroyers in the past week and the sinking of an enemy submarine by one of them in August was announced yesterday by the Navy Department.

The destroyers—the Buck and the Bristol—went down following "underwater explosions," a communique reported. They could have been sunk by mines or torpedoes.

Complete casualty reports of those aboard have not been received, but a spokesman said that the loss of life on the Bristol was "moderate" and that on the Buck "somewhat heavier." Lieut. Comdr. Millard J. Klein, Long Beach, Calif., skipper of the Buck, is listed as missing. Comdr. John A. Glick, Richmond, N. H., commanded the Bristol.

Later in the day, the Navy reported that the Buck had sunk an enemy submarine in the Mediterranean during August while on convoy duty.

And with that they laid the rubber boat over the side and paddled silently away.

For an hour the MTB lay in the moonlight, waiting. The sailors kept close watch on the dark island and nothing happened.

There were no shots, there were no light on the blacked-out island. The whole thing was dead and quiet in the misty moonlight.

At ten minutes of the hour the captain began to look at his watch every half minute, and he muttered to himself about E-boat patrols and the necessity for not putting his ship in danger for nonsense. If there had been any activity ashore he would at least know there was fighting of some kind.

At five minutes of the hour a big shape showed on the water, and because everything is potentially dangerous the gunners swung their machine guns on it and waited for it to identify itself. It approached, and it was a rubber boat. It gently nudged the side of the MTB and a little, slender woman was helped over the side, and then a quite stout admiral in a beautiful overcoat, although the night was warm.

These figures went immediately below, but the leader of the commandos said: "Bert, you will go back with me." Three of the men climbed aboard the MTB, and the rubber boat shoved off again and moved back toward the island.

The three remaining commandos stood limply on the deck. The MTB captain was impatient. "Accompany the admiral," he asked.

"Yes, sir; there were eight

War Theater. — There is a little island very close to the mainland near Naples which has on it a very large torpedo works, one of the largest in Italy. When Italy had surrendered the Germans took the island, mined it thoroughly and ran the detonating wires under the water to the mainland, so that they could blow up the torpedo works if it seemed likely to be captured.

The Germans left a few guards, heavily armed, and they also left an Italian admiral and his wife as kind of hostages to the explosives planted all over the little island.

To a small Anglo-American naval force a curious order came. One single torpedo boat was to take on some British commandos, who were to go ashore in secrecy, cut the wires to the mainland, kill the German guards and evacuate the Italian admiral and his wife.

The boat assigned was a motor torpedo boat and it lay alongside a pier in the afternoon and waited for the commandos to come aboard. The celebrated commandos, the great swashbucklers, took their time in arriving. In fact, they arrived nearly at dusk, five of them, which to their mind is a large military force. And these were very strange men.

They were small, tired-looking men who might have been waiters or porters at a railroad station. Their backs were slightly bent and their knees, knobby and their faces, weary and their hands, large and their feet, worn.

They were dressed in faded shorts and open shirts and their arms were old-fashioned revolver and a long, wicked knife for each. Their leader looked like a tired and petulant mouse who wanted more than anything else in the world to get back to a good safe job in an insurance office with the certainty that his pension would not be held up.

These five monsters came shambling out of the companionway and stood about on the deck. The captain of the torpedo boat said, "You have all the plans now—cut the wires, kill the guards if possible and bring out the admiral and his lady. How long do you think that will take you?"

The leader of the commandos gave the subject his consideration, tapping his lips with his finger. "We should be back in an hour," he said at last.

"An hour? Why, it can't take that long. If you take that long you won't be able to do it at all."

"Oh, the guards business and the wires," the commando explained, "that won't take long."

"What will, then?" the captain demanded.

"Well, the admiral's wife will

Then the commandos came shambling out of the companionway and stood about on the deck. Anglo-American Troops Bore Into German Positions 6 Hours After Crossing Volturno

By Reiman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

At Volturno River Crossing in Italy, Oct. 13 (Delayed).—The U. S. Fifth Army crossed the Volturno River today.

U. S. and British troops surging forward behind a terrific artillery barrage, pierced the German defenses along the river and within the first six hours had penetrated well inside the main enemy positions.

The twisting Volturno River looked like a chain of silver horse shoes as one U. S. unit came down the slopes of the mountains on the side of the valley. The men picked their way through the woods until they came to flat ground. There they halted.

By that time the barrage had shifted to targets several thousand yards beyond the river line. The Allied forces slowly moved toward the bank.

Very Air Quivers

The air quivered with the sound of explosions, both from behind when the guns were fired and ahead when a shell burst. You could see red and yellow lights winking all over the plain. They seemed no bigger than match flares. But each one was a heavy shell addressed to some specific object, a road junction, a haystack, which might not be a haystack at all but a camouflaged strongpoint made of reinforced concrete, a machine-gun post or an advanced command post.

It was more than a mere covering fire designed to keep the Germans stationed on the opposite river bank down in their foxholes. It was an annihilation bombardment created to smash gaping holes in the enemy's depth defenses for 5 or more miles beyond the river. And it covered the floor of the valley like a blanket.

Meanwhile, other guns began dropping smoke shells onto the river line. There was even a greater spurt of flame from these than when they landed. Lazy plumes of smoke, dead white in the yellow light of the moon, rose slowly above each spot where they landed.

White Sheet of Smoke

The smoke gradually thickened and became a solid white sheet between us and the Germans.

Behind that smoke screen troops began emerging from cover at the base of the slope and moving out across the flat ground toward the river.

During the long moments waiting for the protective screen to form the soldiers sat or lay on the ground. When they spoke it was to curse the cold and win. Someone whispered that the river would be "a hell of a sight colder than this."

There was one wistful little joke. A soldier whispered something to the man next to him, and the reply was, "Aw, I was just thinking how much my kid would enjoy this. The noisier it is around the house the better he likes it."

All around us equipment was moving forward.

It had been massed among the trees and behind road bends at the nearest possible points since midnight. The infantry alone might be able to overrun the German river defenses and reach the opposite bank but it couldn't stay there long without heavier weapons for support.

Planning Is Shrewd

Allied commanders had had to figure out how to get the heavy material close enough to the river to push it across quickly without allowing the Germans to spot it.

They accomplished it, and but for that shrewd planning and execution the bridgehead probably wouldn't have lasted until dawn.

An equally difficult role was assigned the Engineers. Their job was to span the river with bridges so that armament too heavy to be ferried across could reach the other side in time to support the infantry.

You can't have too much praise for the men who performed this near-miracle. They were under fire constantly not only from the German artillery but from machine-gun nests that were by-passed or escaped notice by the first waves of infantry. They didn't even have the satisfaction of shooting back. They just stayed there and took it, but the bridges were built.

Tense with cold and excitement, I watched the doughboys scamper across the flat, taking cover from point to point then rising and running ahead a few more yards until finally they disappeared inside the drifting pall of white smoke.

Each little group knew exactly where it was supposed to cross the river. Patrols had located fords or shallow points all along this section of the river and each platoon commander had his spot given into his memory so well that he could find it with his eyes shut.

We heard quick bursts of German machine guns and rifles.

Maybe the doughboys yelled when they hit the other side of the bank. We couldn't hear them for the roar of the artillery.

We lay there waiting and straining our eyes to see through the smoke screen. It wasn't long afterwards that a runner came back and said the crossing had been effected and the troops were moving forward.

Traitor Blamed For Nazi Return To Cos Island

Kills, Turkey, Oct. 14 (AP).—A refugee arriving here from the Aegean island of Cos said today that an Italian traitor made German reoccupation of the island possible.

A fanatically Fascist officer escaped to Rhodes after the British occupied Cos and gave the Germans details of the British approach and landing signals for aircraft, he said.

The Germans thus were able to land a considerable force at the main airport during the night, quickly conquering the dumb-founded airport personnel, he said. He added that it was an easy step to bring in constant reinforcements and overpower the island's other vital points.

Finnish Break With Reich Hinted

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—BBC said tonight that the Finnish Diet foreign affairs committee president had told the diet "we may have to part ways with Germany."

The British broadcast, recorded by the United States Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service, quoted the legislator as saying: "We must now claim for ourselves the right to safeguard the security and interests of our country at all costs. In this connection, we shall employ such means as will appear to us best. This may mean that we may have to part ways with Germany."

Red Dignitaries Honor Nelson at Supper

Moscow, Oct. 14 (AP).—An impressive turnout of Soviet dignitaries, headed by Anastas Mikoyan, commissar of foreign trade in charge of Red army supplies, and including former envoy to America, Maxim Litvinov, attended a buffet supper tonight in Spaso House, residence of the United States Embassy, to honor Donald M. Nelson.

After hot dogs and caviar sandwiches as hors d'oeuvres, they helped themselves to a supper featured by baked beans and spaghetti.

Chinese Fight Fiercely to Halt 5-Pronged Drive From Burma

By the Associated Press
Chungking, Oct. 14.—Reinforced Japanese units—five columns in all—pushed north along the Burma Road at its entrance into southwestern China today. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's headquarters admitted, as Chinese forces fought desperately to hold the five-pronged enemy drive in check.

After announcing yesterday that the Japanese had sent three columns into the advance, the Chinese high command said tonight that two more columns had entered the fighting in the vicinity of Shuan-changchiao River and Lungma. Japanese troops, based on Changchieh, continued their northward push toward Kiatingchieh, the Chinese said, reaching Tatungtsie, where "brisk" interceptive fighting is going on.

One Column Halted

Most of the fighting appeared to be in the general region of the west bank of the upper Salween River, the crossing of which was a possible Japanese objective.

The communiqué reported only harassing action against an enemy column which was said to be pushing south on Mingwang, while a third column moving north from Tengchung was reported stopped in its tracks.

Of the two new drives, the communiqué said the Japanese had won a position on the west shore of Shuanhunchiao River from which it shelled the Chinese positions on the opposite shore. Chinese counterfire, however, silenced the Japanese guns and "caused heavy damage to the enemy."

A fifth push near Lungma was being held.

Of all these operations in southwestern Yunnan Province, the high command said the "severe" fighting had resulted in heavy casualties to both sides.

Operations on the East China Front in the Siaofoing sector, meanwhile, sprang to life again yesterday with "extremely heavy" fighting in the suburbs of that city southeast of the former capital at Nanking.

"Both sides are suffering very heavy casualties," the communiqué continued, "and fighting is still going on."

The high command said its troops recaptured Potien Tuesday, but

Japanese reinforcements with the support of "many bombers" forced the Chinese back to the south, where they "are now engaged in a brave, bloody fight against the enemy."

Here's Where a WOMAN Knows More Than a MAN!

★ We mean the average woman and the average man. And that subject is CLOTHES.

The average man goes into a store, picks out a suit (made for anybody and of any material) and after a few "alterations" starts wearing it.

A woman is far more "fussy" (we know, for we specialize in custom tailoring women's suits and topcoats). She insists on the exact style... the correct size... the right fabric and color.

But there are many men who recognize the importance of clothes that fit exactly, and tailored of fabrics most becoming... and

SUCH MEN ARE OUR CUSTOMERS!

★ We custom tailor their suits and topcoats to their individual measure... of fabrics of their own choosing. Quality of tailoring and perfection of fit are guaranteed!!! AND THE COST IS LESS THAN READY-MADES OF SIMILAR QUALITY! Let us prove this to you!

Rommel to Direct Yugoslav Campaign

Choice by Hitler Deemed Recognition Of Increasing Seriousness of Revolt

London, Oct. 14.—Adolf Hitler, whose armies have been pounded increasingly hard in Yugoslavia, has placed his ace soldier, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, in general command of operations against the Yugoslav patriots, the Berlin radio said tonight.

The announcement followed receipt of a Swiss report through Stockholm that Marshal Rommel also had been placed in full charge of all Nazi-occupied Italy, with Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring recalled from his command of southern Italy after a quarrel with Rommel.

Announcement of assumption of the Yugoslav command by Rommel was made in a German home service broadcast recorded by the ministry of information. Circumstances indicated the announcement was made to quiet unrest in Germany regarding developments in the Balkans.

Rommel to Supervise

The Germans thus made it clear that they regard the Yugoslav patriots as a full-fledged battle foe. It appeared Rommel would act in a supervisory capacity with Field Marshal Baron Maximilian von Weichs, recently named Balkan commander in chief.

Japs Scramble to Surrender After Being in Water 16 Hours

By Rembert James
Associated Press Staff Writer

A United States Torpedo Boat Base, New Georgia, Solomon Islands, Oct. 12 (Delayed).—Capture of the largest group of Japanese naval personnel ever taken out of the water as prisoners in this war was described today by American naval officers who said the hardest part of their job was in keeping the enemy from swarming into rescue boats faster than they could be handled.

"If you think the Japanese never surrender you should have seen these," said a PT section leader who directed the rescue, Lieut. (jg) R. E. Keresey, Montclair, N. J. Several scores of Japanese were captured by four PT boats. The Japanese were survivors of the Vella Gulf naval battle on the night of October 10 when American destroyers sank one enemy cruiser and two destroyers.

"It was about 4:30 p. m. the day after the battle and we were cruising Vella Gulf when we saw the men in the water," said Lieutenant Keresey. "When we got near we saw they were Japs. None had life belts.

"They all were clinging to boat oars or other floating debris. When we first offered to pick up some a few started swimming away, but after this first display they came back to our boats.

"One of them, apparently an officer, had given a signal and they were willing to be rescued. The case we had in picking them up was surprising."

Wanted by Fleischmann! Good Judges of Good Whiskey To Try a Great New Brand!

TASTE! BODY! AROMA!
These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey—and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST

"MAMMATH"? We say not! Take 1 dash of Angostura Bitters, 1/4 oz. sweet vermouth, and 1 1/2 oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!

FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream—to 1/4 level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1 1/2 oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!

Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!

This invitation is written for the few men who are really good judges of good whiskey . . . who can appreciate a whiskey that is as gloriously rich, creamy and delicious as the world's finest, most limited brands—and who do not need a high price to confirm them in their judgment.

We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. We selected the finest grains, and backed them up with the world's most delicate skill.

The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, one of the world's most remarkable whiskeys. Velvety Creamy! Full! Delicious! We are sorry that we can offer Fleischmann's PREFERRED only in limited amounts as all our distilling facilities are devoted 100% to the war effort. If your dealer has Fleischmann's PREFERRED, try it! You'll always be glad you did!

2 From Takoma Park on Jap Exchange Ship Passenger List

A Takoma Park, Md., man and woman are reported among the 1236 Americans on the Japanese exchange ship, Teia Maru, nearing Mormugao, Portuguese India.

The woman is Mrs. Ethelene Bee Anderson, 65, of 4 Hickory ave., wife of J. P. Anderson, missionary still being held prisoner by the Japs.

The daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Williams H. Edwards, Adventist leaders in Takoma Park, Mrs. Anderson was treasurer of the Hakka Mission in China from 1922 until 1932 when she returned to Takoma Park to care for her parents who were in failing health. In 1938 Mrs. Anderson returned to China to join her husband who was superintendent of the Canton Mission. Both were interned by the Japanese in February, 1943.

Born in Battle Creek, Mich., Mrs. Anderson came to Takoma Park, Md., in 1903 to work for the Review and Herald, official organ of the Seventh-Day Adventists. After three years she joined the staff of the general conference, secretary to the treasurer, which position she held until 1922, when she went to Shanghai, China, to marry Mr. Anderson.

Architect Also Aboard

Officials at Adventist headquarters last night announced that Elihu Charles Wood, husband of Mrs. Pearl Wood, 708 Houston ave., was aboard the ship, according to word received from the State Department.

enemy's "decisive strongpoints" on the lower Dnieper.

Knocking out the upper anchor of Germany's 90-mile defense line running southward through Melitopol to the Sea of Azov, the Russians now were in a position to swing southward and free the Crimea, cutting off the huge German forces manning the peninsula, whose only land link with the mainland now is a single track railway running northward through Perekop to Kherson, near the mouth of the winding Dnieper. No Natural Defenses Left

The broken German armies that had manned the Zaporozhe-Melitopol line also were threatened with annihilation in trying to flee across the mudflats between the lower Dnieper and the Sea of Azov, just above the Crimea. There are no natural defenses left to them until they reach the safety of the western bank of the Dnieper, far beyond both outlets from the Crimea.

Gen. Rodion Malinovsky's army took Zaporozhe, a city of nearly 200,000 5 miles southeast of the site at Kichkas of the 110 million dollar hydroelectric works and dam which the Russians destroyed in August, 1941, during their historic "scorched earth" retreat.

Russian troops already were reported pursuing scattered German forces west and southwest of Melitopol while the main units cleaned up the German suicide rearguards fighting from house to house inside Melitopol, which is 70 miles above the Crimea.

Dispatches from Moscow by Associated Press Correspondent Henry C. Cassidy said there was no indication that the German Seventeenth Army was withdrawing from the imperiled Crimea. He said the Germans apparently intended to try to hold the peninsula, supplying troops by sea and air and clinging to such formidable positions as the Perekop Isthmus in the northwest and Sevastopol in the southwest.

Gomel's Fall Appears Likely
"The railway connecting Melitopol with the Crimea has been cut by our troops in two places," the communique said. "Melitopol has been isolated from the Crimea."

Gomel, in lower White Russia, also appeared to be on the verge of falling to the Russians, who had crossed the Sozh River above and below the city and now were attacking its gates. Gomel also was reported being put to the torch by German incendiaries.

raid on Schweinfurt and the sixth major United States Army Air Force raid from British bases this month.

(The Swiss radio said that a "foreign" bomber had made a forced landing near Reims, Switzerland.)

The blow carried the Americans on a round trip of approximately 1000 miles—another long-range attack which is becoming more common daily—but was considerably shorter than the record. On October 9 a force went all the way to east Germany, Poland and East Prussia to hit two aircraft factories and docks and ships at Gdynia and Danzig.

Even before today's attack United States bombers had dropped more than 4400 tons of bombs on German targets so far this month and destroyed 480 German fighters, a record achievement for the Eighth Air Force.

A study of reconnaissance photographs of the damage of Hannover, which the RAF has blasted three times since September 22, showed scarcely a building undamaged in the city's central area between the main railway station and Mache Lake to the southwest.

The lake itself had been roofed over and camouflaged by the Germans in an attempt to throw raiders off the target, the Air Ministry news service said.

Ceiling Prices Set For 13 Vegetables

Dollars-Cents Limit Also Planned For Oranges, Lemons and Grapefruit

By Edwin D. Gritz

Retail prices on 13 vegetables will be 30 to 50 per cent lower this winter than last under forthcoming regulations based on new ceiling prices set at the "country shipping point," the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday.

In addition, OPA General Manager Chester Bowles disclosed that a new schedule is being made to provide dollar and cents ceilings at retail levels for oranges, grapefruit and lemons which hitherto have been controlled at dealer levels. Effective dates of both the new price schedules will be announced shortly.

The 13 vegetables for which maximums will be established in the forthcoming regulations are lima beans, snap beans, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, cucumbers, eggplant, lettuce, green peas, peppers, spinach and tomatoes.

The increase in the cost of living from September, 1942, to May, 1943, was 6.2 per cent. Bowles pointed out, "and three-fifths of this increase was due to the soaring prices of fresh fruits and vegetables alone."

"OPA already has moved to control the prices of some fruits and with these new vegetable ceilings we hope to head off any such spiral before it gets started this season."

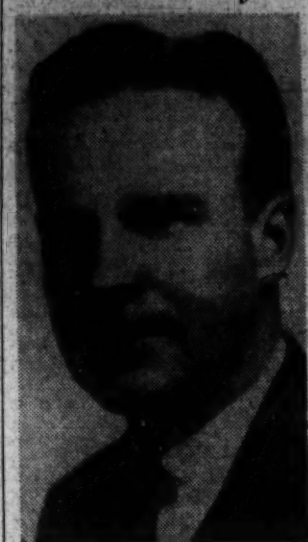

Bowles added that top prices for five more vegetables—beets, asparagus, watermelons, cantaloupes and the 1944 crop of onions—will be announced soon also. This will complete the plan for ceiling prices for the 18 fresh vegetables which he mentioned in a recent press conference.

Pricing on the 13 vegetables will be seasonal, rising and falling by months as they did normally prior to price control, Bowles said. In all cases prices will be set so as to provide the return to the farmer required by law.

The range of retail prices to be fixed (depending on distance from shipping point), per pound unless otherwise noted, together with pre-control prices (in parenthesis) follow:

Lima beans, December through April, 18 to 21 cents; May through October, 13 to 16 cents. (The new prices will be 10 to 30 per cent under 1943 prices.)
Snap beans, May and June, 14 to 16 cents; July and August, 12 to 15 cents; September through December, 14 to 17 cents. (The new prices will be 20 per cent under 1943 prices.)
Cabbage, December through April, 4 to 5 cents; May through November, 4 to 5 cents.

Drastic Drive on Rabies Mapped

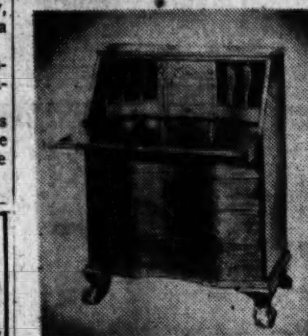

Rabid dog cases in the District and nearby Prince Georges County are on the increase and District Health Officials are planning a drastic program to combat the menace, it was learned yesterday. Details of the plan are withheld until it is presented to the Commissioners sometime in the next two weeks, Dr. James C. Cumming, chief of the Health Department Epidemiological Service, said.

In the meantime Dr. Cumming reported that 58 cases of rabid dogs had been recorded in the District this year. Until April there had not been a recorded case of animal rabies for 12 years, he stated.

Despite rigid restrictions and the shooting of scores of stray dogs in Prince Georges, "the situation is certainly not improving and as a matter of fact seems growing worse," Dr. John M. Byers, Prince Georges health officer asserted. "Four more rabid dog cases were reported between October 9 to October 13," Dr. Byers said. "In one of these cases a child was bitten. What we fear now is that

Time Out for Teatime

More than ever, this pleasant custom becomes important as teatime brings respite toward the end of a wartime day. The cup may hold coffee or tea, but the custom has the same gracious charm. Today, perhaps, your guests will be only the family and a friend or two—gathered around the fireplace in the living room. Tomorrow, you may choose a tea as the simplest and one of the most friendly ways of entertaining a group of guests—spreading your dining table with a distinctive cloth and fine china. Either way, the genial, steaming cup and the tradition behind it are a twice-welcome oasis in Washington at war.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Henry Morgenthau, who has just finished such an excellent job of selling war bonds, is certainly jealous of his job as tax collector. He even resents Justice Byrnes and Judge Vinson being put prominently in the tax picture. When the final tax schedules were prepared he refused to let Economic Stabilizer Vinson see them before they went to Congress. Vinson knew in a general way what they were, having sat in on the preliminary discussions. But Henry wouldn't let him have a peek at the final tax tables the night before their transmission to Congress.

The other day Representative Bob Doughton of North Carolina was lunching with tired, nervous Morgenthau at the famous table covered with silver plaques where the Allied governments signed their debt-funding agreements after the war. As chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Doughton is the key Congressman on taxes. He remarked to the Secretary of the Treasury:

"I'm so glad that Fred Vinson is going to help us out with the tax bill, Mr. Secretary. He used to be chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and he speaks our language."

Morgenthau blushed. "Vinson is not handling the tax bill," he countered. "As long as I'm Secretary of the Treasury, we're fully capable of handling that."

After luncheon, Morgenthau courteously offered Representative Doughton his car and chauffeur to take him back to the Capitol, and Doughton asked the chauffeur to go around to the Federal Reserve Building, where he stopped to call on his old colleague, Judge Vinson.

Later he went up to the Capitol and subsequently received a phone call from the Secretary of the Treasury complaining that Doughton had used his car and chauffeur to call on Judge Vinson.

"I didn't lend you my car to drive 'round there," complained the Secretary of the Treasury, Doughton, who will be 80 years old in three weeks, listened. After he hung up, he remarked:

"I don't know whether I can get along with Henry, he's getting so childish in his old age."

Ikkes' Tire

Harold Ikkes and the OPA were never good friends—until the Ikkes tractor blew a tire.

At Headquarters Farm, Olney, Md., harvesting had begun. Just at the height of operations, the tractor blew a tire. Ikkes learned to his dismay, that the nearest source of a new tire of that size was Akron, Ohio. He filled out his application and wondered how many days of good weather he would lose and whether frost would come before the tire.

Then his farm manager learned that OPA no longer requires ration certificates for used tractor tires. A used tire could be had immediately from Washington, only 15 miles away.

Mr. Ikkes scratched his head, said to his manager, "Well, the OPA makes sense, after all!"

U. S. and British Oil

It hasn't reaked out yet, but there is another significant side to the story of British failure to use Persian oil for Allied war operations.

The flying Senators reported that with American oil reserves being drained the British were not using to capacity their oil around the Persian Gulf. This is absolutely true. However, it also is a fact that Judge Vinson and Byrnes, the White House stabilizers, had been talking to the British on this point and found the British ready to cooperate.

The British, it is true, did not take the initiative in offering their oil, as they might well have done, but much less enthusiastic were the American oil companies.

This probably will be denied, but it became suspiciously apparent to the White House advisers that the big United States oil companies would just as soon continue supplying the oil themselves instead of having the British open up more production around the Gulf of Persia.

Reason for this, it was suspected, ed, was to force an increase in the price of oil at home. The oil companies have been putting tremendous pressure on Economic Stabilizer Vinson and the Government generally to grant them an increased price on oil. One argument, and it has a lot of validity, is that oil is now priced so low there is no incentive to pioneer new fields or pump partially depleted ones. Secretary Ikkes has concurred in this.

However, much of the validity would be removed if a flood of Anglo-Persian oil now relieved United States resources and Allied needs in the Mediterranean.

Meanwhile, sentiment in Congress for an increase in oil prices has become a burning issue, especially among Southwest Congressmen. The Texas delegation sees red on the question, and about 200 solons have signed a secret agreement that they will up the price of oil by law unless Judge Vinson does it first.

However, Judge Vinson, with more than a million railroad employees belligerent over his refusal to grant them a raise of 8 cents an hour, figures that he would have virtual revolution on his hands if he let down the bars on oil while holding them up on wages.

So far he has even resisted the persuasive charm of his old friend and colleague, Speaker Sam Rayburn, for whom he would do almost anything—except increase oil prices.

Merry-Go-Round

On his fifty-fifth birthday last week, Vice President Wallace's office staff staged a birthday party. For a present he received a diary for 1944, in which to write whatever may happen to him on November 7 next year.

When the President drives to Bolling Field all parked cars along the route are cleared away, so no one can lurk behind them. . . . Launching at the Mayflower, Dr. Francisco Del Rio, special Ambassador from Mexico, asked for grated cheese for his spaghetti, but when he learned cheese was rationed he returned it. "I will eat no foods which are scarce in the United States," he said.

PORK HOCKS

With Cabbage and Potatoes

A great favorite with men and frequently served in restaurants, usually with potatoes and cabbage. An easy dish to prepare at home—simply cook at simmering temperature 1½ or 2 hours. Add the potatoes about 45 minutes before hocks are done, and the cabbage wedges about 15 minutes before meat is done.

Social Security Tax Rise Causes Fight

Skirmishing over whether to let Social Security levies double January 1 began at the Capitol yesterday in sharply conflicting proposals presented to Congress' two tax-writing committees.

Dr. Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, presented to the Senate Finance Committee the Administration bid to let the increase take effect as authorized by present law. Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan, twice author of a congressional ban on letting the increase take effect in previous years, said his mind was still open on the issue.

Opposition to the increase was presented to the House Ways and Means Committee by K. C. Richmond, chairman of the taxation committee of the National Retail Dry Goods Association. He said that while his organization early sponsored the Social Security law, "this is not the time to expand benefits nor to increase revenues for this purpose."

Major Dispute in Prospect

The conflicting views foreshadowed what may be a major battle in connection with the bill. Administration leaders earlier gave up plans to call for extension of Social Security benefits as a substitute in part for increased income levies. But Chairman Altmeyer warned that the present Social Security program might be endangered if the automatic increase in levies under present law is again blocked.

He said that the chief trouble with social insurance system has always been lack of adequate financing of old-age retirement benefits.

In 1939, he said, the Government became through the Social Security Act underwriter of life insurance system are low.

"It is always easiest to delay levying the necessary insurance contributions," he said, "thus perverting the insurance system as a whole."

"In this country we are still in a position to avoid these mistakes by getting a clearly established law on the books which will be willing to pay for it. The time to obtain the necessary contributions is when people are able to pay for it and are willing to pay for it because they are getting their money's worth."

"If we should let a situation develop whereby it eventually becomes necessary to charge future actuarial rates in excess of the amount of the protection afforded them, we would be guilty of gross inequity and gross financial mismanagement, bound to imperil our social insurance system."

Altmeyer argued that the great increase in Social Security income during the war meant that there would be an increased future drain on the fund.

The Bridges-Goodwin bill, now before Congress, would protect the life insurance policies of more than 60 million Americans, said Senator Bridges.

The relief sought in this bill is necessary to enable many of those policyholders to maintain their life insurance in the face of rising living costs and taxes, the New Hampshire Senator added at the luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel.

Rail Buoyancy

Props General Stock Market

New York, Oct. 14.—Buyers went at it more courageous in today's stock market and leaders generally recovered fractions to a point or so.

Mild irregularity prevailed at the start. Rails then began to rise and other departments soon got aboard. Activity was slack throughout, however, and negligible selling at the last reduced best prices here and there without altering the main trend.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .2 of a point at 49.8. The come-back was without much breadth, only 768 individual issues being traded. Of these 416 were higher, 171 lower and 181 unchanged. Transfers of 474,973 shares compared with 591,830 the day before.

Both carrier stocks and bonds were aided by dividend forecasts and indications most roads, as the result of climbing revenues, were putting their financial structure in good shape for postwar conditions.

Western Union and Postal Telegraph were up 1/8 and 1/16, respectively, as more attention was given to profits prospects for the merged communications concerns. United Corporation preferred moved up

3/4 in the wake of a pleasing financial statement.

typical Allied leapfrog tactics, had landed at the mouth of the Volturino river where it flows into the Mediterranean and threatened to flank the German defense system along the stream. Several warships are standing off the Volturino river hurling shells into German positions; the German radio reported.

"In carrying out their large-scale attack in the Volturino sector, the British employed a large landing formation for the purpose of pushing eastward in the Volturino Valley and rolling up the German lines," the broadcast said.

Chain Prisoners Taken

(It declared this detachment had been driven together on the beach and was now under a withering fire, and that several bridgeheads across the river had been liquidated with one British regiment wiped out and several hundred prisoners taken.)

The fierceness with which the Germans are defending Rome indicates their appreciation of the value of the possession of the Eternal City for its political and religious effect. Its eventual loss by them may have all the greater repercussions because of their determined fight for it.

General Clark took advantage of subsiding floods and drying ground to hurl his forces into the attack on the Volturino behind a terrific artillery barrage that tore Nazi defenses to shreds. Hundreds of medium and fighter-bombers thundered immediately overhead to dash and demoralize the Germans, who had taken advantage of a protracted rainy period to build formidable defenses.

Tempest of Steel

The first waves of Allied combat troops swam and crossed the water barrier in assault boats and amphibious trucks in the face of a tempest of steel from Nazi machineguns, mortars, rifles and artillery. Once across they were quickly reinforced by American tanks, which charged over bridges thrown together by the engineers. Reports from the front today said the tanks were threatening to isolate German forces on either side of the main bridgehead.

The Nazis, apparently anticipating the attack, had rushed fresh units south from Rome in recent days to try to hold their line. They now have seven divisions strung across the front, and they are showing signs of extreme fatigue from constant Allied pressure.

Just before Clark's forces sprang forward yesterday morning the Germans launched a sharp attack in the Capua area. Some detachments managed to cross the river and gain a brief foothold at the edge of the town, but they were annihilated.

The Germans even threw their carefully hoarded fighter plane strength into the struggle, but a flight of 16 Messerschmitts was beaten off by Spitfires, which shot down two and damaged many more.

All through yesterday and last night the battle raged, and it was obvious the Germans meant to fight for every foot of ground.

The length of the line from the Mediterranean to the Adriatic was flaming with battle. Allied troops after a heavy fight northwest of Benevento captured the town of Guardia, four miles north of the Calore River and only nine miles east of the upper Volturino.

Farther to the northeast the British and Canadians of the British Eighth Army pushed 7 miles to occupy Gildone, which is only 6 miles from Campobasso, an important inland road junction.

In the most dramatic blow of the day's widespread air offensive, American medium bombers protected by Lightning fighters raided the German-held Tirana, the capital of Albania, for the first time. They reported heavy destruction to a Nazi airbase there. Other bombers and fighters made smashing attacks on railway lines, communications and troops. They were unchallenged.

Three administration Senators, meanwhile, clashed hotly in the Senate with Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota, following charges by the North Dakotan that the British are trying to "nose into our politics," and that the British press "made the nastiest kind of comments" about the five world-girdling Senators.

Promptly Challenged

Nye was promptly challenged by Senator Hatch, Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida and Majority Leader Barkley when he repeated a report he attributed to Drew Pearson, radio commentator and columnist, quoting Prime Minister Churchill as saying it would be "a tragic catastrophe" if the President is defeated for reelection.

Pepper said Nye had directed "a gaff in the side of our ally," and "a blow at the President," while Barkley and Pepper denied Churchill ever made such a statement.

Finland Will Boost Payments to U. S. By $42,000 a Year

Finland agreed yesterday to increase its war-debt payments to this country by more than $42,000 a year for 20 years in order to overtake a two-year lapse caused by the Russo-Finnish War.

An agreement announced jointly by Finnish Minister Hjalmar J. Procopio and Undersecretary of the Treasury Daniel W. Bell said the payments would be made semi-annually, June 15 and December 15.

Those are the dates for Finland's regular debt payments, resumed last June with a check for $188,945.36. First payment under yesterday's agreement, however, will not fall due until June 1945.

Finland, only country still making war-debt payments; still owes the United States about $9,000,000.

24 Coal Mines, 1200 Workers Are Idle in South

By the Associated Press Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 14.—Republic Steel Corp. announced today it was taking two blast furnaces out of production because of the fuel shortage resulting from the work stoppage in Alabama coal mines, which left 24 mines, employing more than 1200 men, idle.

E. I. Evans, southern district manager for Republic, said, two Birmingham furnaces would be banked tomorrow "since we can't make iron without coke."

The coal work stoppage spread to 19 additional mines today, after five were idle yesterday. Both union and company spokesmen said the miners quit work as a result of Government release of the mines to their owners.

Yanks Smash Volturino Line, Pour Tanks Through Gaps

Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces, some months ago gave a tipoff to the difference in his remark that Liberators and Fortresses are "the last of the small bombers."

Introduction of the new bomber into the Nation's aerial arsenal will not mean the tapering off of production schedules of present-day bombers, it was made clear recently by Charles E. Wilson, executive vice chairman of the War Production Board.

It was recently disclosed, also, that the Flying Fortress was undergoing changes to increase its bomb load to ten tons, making it the heaviest in the world—until, presumably, the super-Fortress gets into the fighting.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

Strong Peace Policy Group Asks Hearing

ask of the committee will call for international machinery for the peaceful settlement of disputes, not specifically provided in the subcommittee draft.

The bipartisan group also favors clearer provision for use of military force if necessary to suppress aggression, but may not press this demand if this meaning can be read into the subcommittee call for "establishment and maintenance of international authority with power to prevent aggression and to preserve the peace of the world."

Leaders conceded privately that strengthening amendments might command a majority vote, but not nearly so large a ballot as the compromise, supported by middle-of-the-roads and most Senate former isolationists.

Claim Two-thirds Majority

They claimed at least a two-thirds majority for the compromise draft (enough to ratify a treaty) and indicated the Administration was willing to sacrifice stronger language in the interest of an overwhelming vote and less controversial debate.

From leading House Foreign Affairs committee members and some Senators, came some criticism of the subcommittee's decision to proceed with a separate Senate resolution, ignoring House action on the similarly worded Fulbright resolution, which called for Senate concurrence.

If the subcommittee procedure stands, the House and Senate will be on record for two separate foreign policy statements, instead of one concurrent expression of Congress, contemplated by the House action.

Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs committee could not conceal his disappointment, saying: "It is not the function of the Senate and House to work independently on a matter of such vital importance."

In the Senate, Senator John L. McClellan (Democrat) of Arkansas proposed substitution of the Fulbright resolution for the Senate measure, but, due to Senate stress on its own prerogatives, was not nearly so certain the move would succeed.

Three administration Senators, meanwhile, clashed hotly in the Senate with Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota, following charges by the North Dakotan that the British are trying to "nose into our politics," and that the British press "made the nastiest kind of comments" about the five world-girdling Senators.

Promptly Challenged

Nye was promptly challenged by Senator Hatch, Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida and Majority Leader Barkley when he repeated a report he attributed to Drew Pearson, radio commentator and columnist, quoting Prime Minister Churchill as saying it would be "a tragic catastrophe" if the President is defeated for reelection.

Pepper said Nye had directed "a gaff in the side of our ally," and "a blow at the President," while Barkley and Pepper denied Churchill ever made such a statement.

Finland Will Boost Payments to U. S. By $42,000 a Year

Finland agreed yesterday to increase its war-debt payments to this country by more than $42,000 a year for 20 years in order to overtake a two-year lapse caused by the Russo-Finnish War.

An agreement announced jointly by Finnish Minister Hjalmar J. Procopio and Undersecretary of the Treasury Daniel W. Bell said the payments would be made semi-annually, June 15 and December 15.

Those are the dates for Finland's regular debt payments, resumed last June with a check for $188,945.36. First payment under yesterday's agreement, however, will not fall due until June 1945.

Finland, only country still making war-debt payments; still owes the United States about $9,000,000.

24 Coal Mines, 1200 Workers Are Idle in South

By the Associated Press Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 14.—Republic Steel Corp. announced today it was taking two blast furnaces out of production because of the fuel shortage resulting from the work stoppage in Alabama coal mines, which left 24 mines, employing more than 1200 men, idle.

E. I. Evans, southern district manager for Republic, said, two Birmingham furnaces would be banked tomorrow "since we can't make iron without coke."

The coal work stoppage spread to 19 additional mines today, after five were idle yesterday. Both union and company spokesmen said the miners quit work as a result of Government release of the mines to their owners.

Yanks Smash Volturino Line, Pour Tanks Through Gaps

Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces, some months ago gave a tipoff to the difference in his remark that Liberators and Fortresses are "the last of the small bombers."

Introduction of the new bomber into the Nation's aerial arsenal will not mean the tapering off of production schedules of present-day bombers, it was made clear recently by Charles E. Wilson, executive vice chairman of the War Production Board.

It was recently disclosed, also, that the Flying Fortress was undergoing changes to increase its bomb load to ten tons, making it the heaviest in the world—until, presumably, the super-Fortress gets into the fighting.

Navy Lays Brewster Troubles To Labor Laws and Agencies

forces" to refuse the orders of superior officers. The Navy Department was immediately requested by Brewster to obtain a statement on the status of that proposed action.

The Assistant Secretary, under a rain of questions on the subject of open loading in Brewster plants, finally answered that "the very meat of the coconut" in Brewster's failure to produce was the restrictive labor contract with the union headed by Tom De Lorenzo.

He also explained that the Navy had seriously considered taking over the plants, but explained that it could not be done while the matter of labor difficulties was being considered by the National Labor Relations Board or the War Labor Board.

Stress Management Difficulties

The three Navy officers who followed him, however, much closer to the Brewster picture, admitted loading, but put far greater stress upon management difficulties.

Commander Dupuy revealed that the Brewster officials, for example, never had had a list of the parts that went into the making of an American bomber. Asked how the production and flow of materials for those bombers could be controlled without such a list, Dupuy said:

"That's just it, they weren't controlled." He and other witnesses revealed that most shortages of materials were shortages of parts made in one or other of the Brewster plants and not shortages of engines furnished by the Government, nor of parts under outside subcontractors. Sometimes Navy officers had to hunt around and find great stockpiles of needed materials that had been lost somewhere in one of the plants.

It fell to Admiral Kraus to draw first blood for the Navy, first by attacking the idea of the Navy's canceling its fighter contract with the Smith-Connally Act, passed by Congress itself, had made any Navy operation of the plant of dubious value.

The admiral waded in fighting with the statement that the committee had repeatedly suggested the Navy could use its power of contract cancellation to improve plant conditions.

"The fucrum of that lever is the neck of our country, gentlemen," Kraus declared. "The impact on the war effort itself must control the use of that lever and we must have planes."

Asked if the Navy couldn't run the plants under the War Powers Act, Kraus replied:

"If you read the Smith-Connally Act, I think you will take it to mean that if we did take over the plants we would have to operate them under the existing labor agreement."

Ousted Guards to Return

Kraus said the Navy might have anticipated passage of such a measure and recognition that it might be "saddled" with existing labor contracts.

Representative Johnson (Republican) of California asked if, under the Smith-Connally Act, the Navy could not have referred the labor contract to the War Labor Board.

"That is just what has been done now, under private management," replied Kraus.

Committee members were incensed at a report from Philadelphia that De Lorenzo had announced the four plant guards, dismissed from the Coast Guard Reserve with bad conduct records, were going back to work today on the production line. They drew an admission from Bard that he did not think it would be "helpful," but other officers declined to comment. Bard declined to comment on whether or not Kaiser was following "the same old appeasement policy."

Silver Spring Man Wounded in Action In North Africa

Sergt. John Michael Mahaney, 25, son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Mahaney, 612 Mississippi ave., Silver Spring, Md., has been wounded in action in North Africa.

Mahaney's family was informed yesterday.

A paratrooper, Sergeant Mahaney was stationed at Camp Croft, S. C., before going overseas last April. He entered the service in February, 1941.

Born in Washington, Sergeant Mahaney was well known in sports circles here. He attended Business High School and Parkview School.

In his last letter to his parents, received two months ago, Sergeant Mahaney wrote: "What we are fighting for is only too evident here. If my number is up soon, don't worry for I want you to know that I am glad to be doing my part even to the loss of my life. Always be prepared for that, Mom and Dad—His will is my will."

Sergeant Mahaney has three brothers, Charles E., Joseph A. and William Mahaney; four sisters, Mrs. Dorothy Louise Hill, Mrs. Elizabeth Urcola and Misses Margaret Lee Mahaney and Mary Mahaney.

Rabaul

In the year and a half since the Japanese came into possession of Rabaul, they have made it into a formidable land and air base and the anchor of their defense system in the south and southwest Pacific. That base is now very definitely threatened. The conquest of Salamaua, Lae and Finschhafen in New Guinea coincident with the capture of Munda, Vella La Vella, Kolombangara and other islands in the Solomons has made it possible for General MacArthur to concentrate a considerable amount of air power on Rabaul. In fact, for the first time since that theater became active, it is now possible to give fighter protection to bombing missions with Rabaul as the target.

This week saw the assault on Rabaul undertaken in earnest. Throwing every bomber and fighter he could into the attack, Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Allied air forces in the southwest Pacific, carried out a raid which proved so devastating as to cause him to say that the event "marks the turning point in the war in the south Pacific." Something like 177 enemy planes were destroyed or damaged by our fighters, and three destroyers, three merchant vessels and 43 smaller craft were sunk. In comparison with the heavy blows dealt to the enemy, our losses—five planes—were negligible. The Allies today enjoy complete mastery of the air in the south Pacific. It may not be very long before Rabaul is ours and our forces are in a position to bring the war very much closer to Japan proper.

Co-Belligerent

It is to be doubted whether the Italian declaration of war will have any immediate or direct bearing on the military situation. But, aside from its obvious moral effect in Germany and throughout the Balkans, it should have useful indirect consequences. From now on any Italians who follow the lead of the discredited and contemptible ex-Duce and give aid and comfort to Germany will be traitors and subject to the punishment meted out to traitors.

How valuable Italy will be as a co-belligerent is a question which will produce different answers. As a soldier in this war the Italian has not been distinguished. But there have been exceptions. In the early days of the desert warfare the Italians under the Duke of Aosta acquitted themselves well, and later in Tunisia the Sandra division is said to have fought with considerable bravery. The rule, however, is that the Italians have been far from formidable as adversaries. Perhaps the prime reason was that they had no stomach for their task as the ally of the hated German, especially as they saw themselves denied equipment and arms, generally by theft. It may be that they may do better in helping to rid their soil of the German invader. Those who lived to fight another day, at any rate, now have their chance under Badoglio, himself a strategist of no mean renown.

Thus the Badoglio government's declaration of war on Germany marks the complete swing of the pendulum since the "dreadful" days when Benito Mussolini betrayed the Italian nation and people by linking their fortunes with those of Hitler's Reich. What has happened in Naples and elsewhere in the peninsula during recent days should not terrify a people with stamina. Rather the bestial deeds of the Nazis should put some iron into the Italian soul. Those happenings show what Mussolini in his vanity and blindness and megalomania refused to concede, but which the Italian people long ago began to sense, viz., that Germany has always been Italy's enemy. Now it is clear that there can be no peace in Italy until the barbarians are driven beyond the Alps and the once smiling but now unhappy land is purged of their contaminating and destructive presence. The Allies will welcome their late enemy as co-belligerent, though without prejudice to the terms of armistice, which give the Italians no voice in the final settlement.

It is gratifying to find that this welcome is extended by Russia as well as Britain and America. In the early days of the Mediterranean fighting there seemed to be a disposition to keep Russia out of Mediterranean affairs. But, with Moscow aligned on the Italian armistice, then on the Mediterranean Commission, and now on the Italian declaration of war against Germany, there is something approaching a community of policy. Equally gratifying is the impending visit to Italy of Count Carlo Sforza, one of Italy's most honored sons, former Foreign Minister in Italy, and an anti-Fascist of many years' standing. There had been some uneasiness here that the trip might be blocked. This arose over a literal interpretation of A. M. G. regulations which would have prohibited the return to Italy of sons of Italy in exile. Few foreign exiles have more standing in America than Sforza. No Italian outside Italy commands more confidence. Inside Italy he is the leader of the Action Party. Thus, when Sforza believes that the wisest course at this time is for all elements opposed to the Germans to stick together, any doubts about the wisdom of collaborating with Badoglio should disappear from any suspicious American mind. First things must come first, and in Italy that means the war on Germany. Sforza's counsel to work in harmony to that end through the Badoglio government is endorsed in a statement made by Assistant Secretary of State Berle. The decision as to Italy's future form of government can be left to the Italian people themselves to make after Italy has been liberated. The Allies have renewed that necessary pledge.

Senate And The Peace

The corpus vile of isolationism has been interred by a vote of 7 to 1 by a Senate subcommittee. It is said that the ceremony will be completed by the full Senate Foreign Relations Committee and then by over two-thirds of the Senate. In that event the Senate will have signified in advance its acceptance of the principle of American cooperation in the establishment and maintenance of world order. This, of course, is a long way from acceptance of the exact obligations which the Executive might contract. There is room, as there should be, for differences of opinion over the mechanisms which can best realize this expressed determination. But the vote, if concurred in by substantially the entire Senate, is an earnest that the task of finding the right mechanisms will be undertaken with a sense of world responsibility. It is with that understanding that the outside world will view the new resolution.

It took this subcommittee nearly thirty weeks to hand down the present resolution. At one time it looked as if the job would be shelved. For the sudden irruption of action there were three reasons: the Fulbright resolution in the House, the steady pressure of public opinion, and the coming Moscow conference. Of these factors the House step was most decisive. More responsive to popular feeling, the Representatives felt the necessity to put themselves on record in favor of world collaboration. The vote was 360 to 29. It put the august Senate, conscious of its prerogatives, on the spot. Perhaps the issuance of a resolution clothed in different phraseology was a reminder to the unceremonious House that the Senate moved in this particular domain entirely of its own volition. But none can doubt the influence of House needling. When the Fulbright resolution was passed, the country at large responded enthusiastically, and the spur to the Senate to do something of the same sort gathered a momentum which has never slackened.

Neither the House nor the Senate resolution is anything more than a generalization. And both are worded with caution enough to include even a dubiety about the step taken. The House under Republican pressure backed American participation "through constitutional processes" in the "creation of appropriate international machinery." The reservation is, of course, meaningless. But in the phrase there was more than a hint that the President must not feel he now has a blank check. In the Senate a dihard effort turned upon a reminder of American sovereignty. The United States would join with "free and sovereign" nations to prevent aggression and preserve peace. Here is perhaps a suggestion to Mr. Roosevelt not to go too far in an "abridgment" of sovereignty in contributing to world organization. To such levels must we go in finding the lowest common denominator!

It is thus patent from both resolutions that the interment of isolationism is only the beginning of the task of building up world organization. There are many residual concepts standing in need of burial. Chief of them is the notion that, though collaboration with other nations is required as a matter of survival, our collaboration somehow or other involves a resignation of some of our national sovereignty. Isn't it much more valid to think of the coming part we intend to play in the world as an exercise and a strengthening of our sovereignty? Surely. This country is too puissant nowadays to harbor any fear that our voice will be drowned in the next ordering of world affairs. Our sovereignty may have been something to worry about in our nursing period, but not now, when our Nation is grown and eminent. Moreover, sovereignty was a word with meaning in the days of the sailing vessel. But there is something inappropriate in the old exclusive meaning of sovereignty when no part of the world is more than 48 hours away by air. That makes national life tolerable, nay possible, only by an extension of sovereignty in some overall organization based on law and order, just as our individual liberty within a community is tolerable only in a framework of overall legal constraints. Only as we base our thinking upon this new concept shall we be able to join our heads to our hearts in creating the machinery that these resolutions envisage.

Still the resolutions mark the signal of the American Legislature to an orientation of policy which would secure the peace for which we are fighting. We hope that the solons will go further. After the Senate has accepted its subcommittee's resolution the House would be responsive to national sentiment by coming down from the realm of generalization. Perhaps it would be necessary only to recognize the need to continue the wartime setup of the combined staffs and boards of the United Nations as a starter in world collaboration, as Mr. Hull suggests. Here at least is a functional organization which cannot be broken up without immediately unsettling the world when the shooting is over.

Hire Learning

Representative Ramspeck, it seems to us, has made a point when he complains about the excessive veneration by civil service personnel officers for college degrees. Because of this curious fetishism, he says, the Nation is being deprived of the services of men and women who might be very useful to the war effort. He goes even farther and charges that a great many inexperienced young squirts, with little else than their college degrees to recommend them, have wangled their way into positions where they have the power to reject the services of "older men, technically trained, with a record of achievement in private industry."

The Civil Service Commission has indignantly denied this accusation in toto. Nevertheless, without any specific information on the subject, we are inclined to think there may be much justice in what Mr. Ramspeck says. The passion for label and certification is by no means confined to the Government service, but is characteristic of the modern American psychology. Anyone, for example, who has been fortunate enough to have himself labeled an "expert" or "authority" may feel assured that whatever opinions he may care to express will have something equivalent to the force of dogma among those who read or listen to them. Similarly, the function of education is not to impart wisdom or even learning, but to bestow "credits."

For the purposes of filling out a standardized application form, it is much more important to be able to label one's self baccalaureus artium or magister artium than to know anything much about the various arts involved. It recalls the story of the man, who after serving for many years as a lighthouse-keeper, was terrified by the news that he must take an examination to determine his fitness to continue in his job. "Well, why do you worry?" asked his wife. "Surely, if anybody knows about lighthouses, you do." "That's just it," he replied bitterly. "Them people won't ask me what I know about lighthouses; they'll ask me, 'Who ius Unkas?' But nowadays it is not important even to know who Unkas was, but merely to be qualified to know who he was, should the question for any reason ever arise.

We seem to remember a remark attributed to the late William James that the only possible use of a college education was to enable you to recognize a good man when you saw one. But if Mr. Ramspeck is right, then it works just the other way around. Perhaps the Miller in the Canterbury Tales came closer to the truth when he observed that, "The greatest clerks beeth not the wisest men"—and maybe not the greatest clerks either.

Prodigal's Return

The American Federation of Labor has given John L. Lewis a somewhat cautious invitation to return to the fold. Its arms are open, but its muscles are plainly flexed. What the convention at Boston did was to authorize its executive council to negotiate the readmission of the United Mine Workers Union with the AFL. But as Matthew Woll put it, "This council is not going to bargain away the jurisdictional rights of any organization merely to admit the United Mine Workers."

Negotiations between the AFL and the UMW are not likely to be altogether simple. The Federation council members may be willing to inter their own Progressive Miners for the sake of securing the powerful Lewis organization. But they will run into a real stumbling block when they ponder the implications of Mr. Lewis' pet project, District 50. This impinges on the interests of so many AFL unions that the jurisdictional differences may prove insuperable. Even outside the province of the AFL, District 50 has attempted, with very little success, to organize American farmers. James Patton of the National Farmers Union reminded the Boston convention of a Federation pledge to stay out of the agricultural field. Apparently, District 50 will have to be abandoned by Mr. Lewis before he can rejoin the parent organization which he disrupted eight years ago.

By readmitting the United Mine Workers, the AFL would gain numerical strength in its rivalry with the CIO. But it would pay for this by providing John L. Lewis with a larger forum than he now enjoys for the expression of his militant and intransigent brand of unionism. That the AFL would grow in prestige or in national esteem from Lewis' presence is altogether doubtful. For Mr. Lewis is not now a wholly beloved figure in the United States. He is a man to be feared even when bearing gifts.

TOAST FOR 1943

Let us not forget them, those in a dark land
Who wander hungry, hand in hollow band
Over the sterile dunes, or crouch in the snow
Of mountain passes. These are the people

Who watch their shadows grow Thinner there on the vineless wall and the fruitless ground,
Men of the busied town and the silent steeples;
Still, still it is, no ringing sound,
For there is mourning in the market-place,
And the hunters hunted in winter-chase.

They are not watching soft flocks by night;
Let us not forget them as we stand
To drink our wine . . . we too await the light
With them, those left in a dark land.

Exclusion Act

By Mark Sullivan

Unfair To Chinese

REPEAL of the Chinese Exclusion Act, requested by President Roosevelt, is expected to come before the House next week. There is some opposition to the repeal. But it is safe to say that nine-tenths of the opposition is based on almost fantastic misunderstanding of the nature of the repeal bill and will disappear when debate in the House clarifies it. Hardly any measure pending in Congress is so much in need of explanation and knowledge of its background.

The Chinese Exclusion Act is an exclusion act—it is not a mere immigration restriction act, nor immigration quota act. The Exclusion Act stands apart from the immigration restriction acts, with which the public is familiar. Confusion on this point accounts for much of the opposition to repeal of the Exclusion Act.

THE REASON for exclusion of Chinese goes back almost a hundred years, and the Exclusion Act was enacted 61 years ago. When gold was discovered in California, in the late 1840's, there was practically no labor on the Pacific Coast, and little means of getting labor from the Eastern part of the country, for no transcontinental railroad had yet been built. In this condition, Chinese labor began to come in, and soon swelled to large numbers. By 1852 more than half the population of San Francisco was Chinese. There was anticipation that San Francisco might become a Chinese city—in deed that the whole country west of the Rocky Mountains might become preponderantly Chinese.

In the late 1860's the first transcontinental railroad was built. This brought American laborers from the East. They found jobs almost monopolized by the Chinese—on the early Pacific Coast railroads, more than half the employees were Chinese. The Chinese worked for lower wages, had a lower standard of living, than American labor could compete with. Presently there were ugly riots in San Francisco, and as far east as Denver. The condition led Congress, in 1882, to pass the Exclusion Act, prohibiting absolutely the immigration of Chinese labor, with only narrow exemptions for limited classes, diplomats, students and the like.

Meanwhile, with the Chinese excluded absolutely, there was no limitation at all on immigration from European countries. Natives of Italy, Germany, Britain, Russia, Austria-Hungary, of all European countries, could enter the United States in as large numbers as chose to come. They did come, hundreds of thousands each year, in some years over a million.

PRESENTLY, ABOUT 1915, we began to feel concern about the numbers of immigrants coming from European countries. We passed a series of restriction acts, "quota" acts. The quota permitted to come from any European country was fixed as a percentage of the number of natives of that country already in America. By the quota acts, a total of some 150,000 immigrants from all European countries are permitted to enter the United States each year.

Here then is the present situation. From European countries large numbers of immigrants may come to America each year. But no Chinamen may come. The discrimination hurts the feelings of a people who are our loyal ally in war.

What is now proposed is a double step. Repeal of the Chinese Exclusion Act—and at the same time put China on the same basis as European countries, the quota basis.

Inasmuch as the number of Chinese already in America is very small, the number who would be admitted on a quota basis would be only about 105 a year.

Opposition to this is based largely on lack of knowledge of the facts here set out. This opposition, based on lack of information, is increased by a state of mind recently arising in America. Some Americans have been made a little jittery on the whole subject of immigration. They fear that, with the end of the war, great numbers of persons in war-torn Europe will want to come to America, and that in order to accommodate them, an attempt may be made to relax our immigration restriction laws. Further jittery apprehension is caused by proposals for setting up an international world government. The apprehension is that if a world government were set up, free immigration from one country to another might be permitted.

These apprehensions result in a mood of suspicion about any proposal to change any detail of our immigration laws. Mistakenly, the suspicion is directed against repeal of the Chinese Exclusion Act.

4-F's
While "Government 4-F's" recent letter in The Post carries some sense, the writer has overlooked a fact in psychiatry, to wit, that although a psychoneurotic may be unfit for military duty, due to mental confusion and the danger of a sudden crack up under stress, he may do pretty well in the calm of civilian life. This applies to not a few 4-F's, particularly those able to get good examination marks and good efficiency ratings.

After The War

Government In Germany

IT IS widely assumed that one of the things we are fighting for is the setting up of a new form of government in Germany. Some quarters think it desirable to extend our control over the Germans to such a point that we supervise and regulate the school system. For the sake of world safety, they argue, the seed of Teutonic bellicosity must be nipped before it gets a chance to sprout.

Unfortunately, the imposition of controls by the victor upon the vanquished—controls that carry over into "peace" times—is one of the surest ways of sowing the seed of future trouble. European victors have tried to do just this on many occasions through the centuries, but have merely succeeded in brewing new wars.

The experience of 1918 is fresh in our minds. Then, as now, Germany had become a nation hated by many enemies around the world. Then, as now, the war had political as well as military objectives.

In 1918, we were fighting to make the world "safe for democracy," and it was generally assumed that one way to further the process was to see that Germany emerged from the war with a democratic form of government. The Kaiser was the symbol of the hated Prussian militarism. The Kaiser must go, the German people must rule themselves.

OUR ENEMIES understood quite clearly, in 1918, that this was a condition of peace. As soon as they realized that the war was militarily lost, they put aside their arrogance and began to squirm and crawl, as Germans do, to appease those whom they recognize as stronger than themselves. In order to placate us into granting them an armistice, they "liberalized" their government, and then went beyond that and had a "revolution," from which they emerged with a republic.

Obviously, a republic was the most sensible form of government for Germans who hoped swiftly to be readmitted to the family of nations as equals and brothers. The few German hot-heads who couldn't see this, and who persisted for some months of 1919 in waging civil war, hoping to establish communism, or monarchy, or military rule, were speedily put down by the rational majority.

The thing to be remembered, however, is the fact that the sole reason why the Germans wanted a German republic, was to appease the victors. The republic was a symbol of defeat. Left to their own devices, they might or might not have come to this form of government—the chances are rather that they would not. Had they won the war they would certainly have continued as a parliamentary monarchy, at least for the time being. Had they ever had a true and spontaneous revolution, they would probably have swung much further to the left than was done at Weimar.

THE GERMANS hated and despised their own democracy, and came to hate all the other democracies for imposing democracy upon them. Their desire to defy democracy (which reached a point where they were willing to defy their own house) became an obsession. Ultimately they escaped from democracy by the simple process of choosing a militarist-royalist Prussian general as the head of state . . . and allowing him to name the rabid Hitler as autocratic chancellor. Hitler waited for old man Von Hindenburg to die, and then assumed sole rule as "Fuehrer."

With a great sigh of pleasure, the Germans escaped from the hated democracy and chose their own form of government. In innumerable mass meetings, plebiscites and other demonstrations, they announced to the world that they had what they wanted.

From our point of view, this German government is ineffectual, corrupt, and incredibly stupid. Within a short six years, Hitler managed to ruin German relations with every other power that counted. By plunging an impoverished nation into production for war, he made it quite certain that German economy would not regain a sound footing during our lifetime. He endangered the rest of the world, but most of all he endangered Germany herself. For he embarked on a war that must reduce Germany, through defeat, to the position of a second-rate state.

This is the form of government the Germans have chosen, and it has made them world pariahs. Surely they could have no complaint if we forced them to remain a National-Socialist state after the war, with Hitler-Goring-Goebbels-Ribbentrop at their head as long as those "Fuehrers" live. Instead of handing them democracy, let 'em hunger for it. Or is that punishment too great, even for Germans?

Five Junketeers

Let us suppose that five members of the British House of Commons made a swift junket across the United States, to Alaska to Hawaii and then to our headquarters in Australia. When they returned to England they did—let us suppose—make a report to the House of Commons with suitable "leaks" to the press. The report based on a superficial examination of 40,000 miles of history was—again let us suppose—highly critical of United States methods, strategy and conduct. Can you imagine the violence of the reaction in this country? Can you imagine the immediate deterioration in our relations with our British ally? Above all have you any difficulty in imagining the jubilation such a move would bring to the Reich Propaganda Ministry?

Yet we assume, as a matter of course, that five of our junketeers can make public their impressions, states as fact not as impressions, without any regard of the value of those impressions to the greater comfort of the enemy and the discouragement of our Allies.

That the report of our junketeers should be weighed and examined by wise and able persons is sound and constructive. That it should be allowed to "leak" to the press to be twisted and distorted to the particular political attitude of any given paper is stupid.

No doubt our junketeers are convinced that their passing glimpses are proven fact and not impression. Would it not be better that they be verified before they are paraded. Our Allies have suffered enough without the added burden of international politics streamlined to 1944.

I am a Negro. Several weeks ago I read an edition of The Post in which you commented editorially on the testimony given at the F. E. P. C. hearings on job discrimination in the railroad industry.

I have just finished reading your editorial comment on the resignation of Mr. Haas as chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices and the difficult and important national problem with which his committee had just begun to grapple.

There have been times when I have been in disagreement with The Post's treatment in its editorial and news columns of matters wholly or vitally affecting colored Americans; however, I was compelled to admire your fearless, forthright and objective treatment of so controversial a subject as job

Drafting Labor

In your issue of October 8, J. J. Kral of New Mexico strongly supports the Austin-Wadsworth bill to draft labor, and at the same time castigates K. S. for fearing passage of the bill might produce nazism in this country.

Apparently Mr. Kral is ignorant of the fact that we have virtual conscription of labor right now. The "job freeze" and attendant regulations of War Manpower Commission today have American labor in a near state of peonage. If Mr. Kral should doubt this, let him resign his position in a so-called essential industry to accept more remunerative employment. He will shortly discover his freedom of individual initiative—the right to get a better living for himself and family—no longer exists.

Japanese Savagery

This is a word of appreciation of your editorial, "Japanese Savagery," on the beheading of an Allied aviator at Salamina.

It is encouraging to know that the American people are beginning to realize the kind of enemy they are fighting in the Pacific War.

This is the kind of cruelty that the Korean people have been enduring for the past 38 years since their country was subjugated by Japan.

Take the case of the Korean massacre in Tokyo in 1932, right after the earthquake, as an illustration. The Japanese government wanted to give vent to the pent-up feeling of fear and dissatisfaction of the populace. So they started the rumor that the Koreans were plotting a revolt and encouraged the people to kill the Koreans. As a result, according to an American eyewitness in Tokyo at that time, "every Korean man, woman and child within their reach was butchered like sheep in the stockyard." But precious little of this human butchery was ever reported to the American press at that time.

Japanese savagery! Yes, we will hear plenty more of it before this war is over. I hope the American people will remember all the treachery, savagery and fiendishness of the Japanese until the day when Tokyo is occupied by the American forces.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Word From All-Out Arlene, The WAC

Dear Sir:

You probably know by this time that I am in southern Italy. I am working for a colonel who is an older ruler than all the old rulers found on the Italian maps. In fact I am something of an old ruler myself. It's the heat, the dust and the tempo. Our boys are doing a terrific job and are standing it well, although there is one jeep who keeps giving me hard looks. He is back from Salerno for a rest and I believe he suspects me of being the WAC who released him for front line duty!

This is a land of heat waves, olives, red peppers, panic and complex difficulties. After a week in this war theater a girl shakes off any fear that she ever had that she might be sent to Iceland. It is really so warm here that they are advertising Vesuvius as a summer resort.

I am so toughened up by my experiences that my girl friends call me Hard-Boiled Arlene. What I would give for some good old conveniences of home! Washing in hot water would now impress me as almost unconstitutional. If I ever get into a modern bathtub again I will have to have written instructions on how to use it. Nellie Shaw says she really found a bed with a box spring and overstuffed pillows last week and had no trouble sleeping in it, but I know she is exaggerating. You can't tell me she could stand a luxury like that after being in Mother Hobby's Dimpled Fusiliers over here all these months.

She and I put up for two or three nights in a building that had been badly shelled. Our room had the north wall missing and no roof on it. It was quite a sensation to fall into bed and find yourself staring right into the night air, with a bunch of clouds where the ceiling light ought to be. And you have no idea how funny it seems to turn over and find yourself in an open-faced room, like something in a store window.

Nellie Shaw says it saves opening windows anyhow.

But the life is not so bad. At times I almost think I am on a tour. I've seen some of the sights in Africa and Egypt since arriving and, of course, I didn't miss much in Sicily. I wish those awful Nazis wouldn't ruin Venice, Florence, Genoa and all those places before we reach them. We hope there will be an invasion of southern France by way of Nice and Monte Carlo.

Terry McDougall is in the thick of things, but I haven't seen him for some time now. The last I heard from him he was terribly sore. He had been put on a transport plane ferrying a load of mules to Sicily, and it seems the mules had not been house-broken and were also subject to air sickness. When the plane landed the mules were all right but Terry was in frightful shape.

There was a story that the plane got into trouble and that Terry's job was to put parachutes on the mules and make them jump. Can you imagine it?

I can't get into one letter all I want to tell you. Rush me some more cleansing tissue and any kind of hand lotion. What the Italian sun does to your skin is awful. All my best.

ARLENE.

What's this about the WAVES not being allowed to serve abroad? What has a WAVE got that needs protection more than a WAC has got? I know. It's those hats!

We don't know just what this insurance feature of the tax bill is all about, but we assume that if the income tax kills a man his relatives are permitted to get the body without an inheritance levy.

Adolf Hitler is now making pep talks to the German armies. And each one, we assume, ends with that old order given by the fight manager to the groggy pug at the bell for the last round, "Now go in and fight him your own way, kid!"

It must disturb an American commander no end to appeal to his country for reinforcements and get five Senators.

Home-Front

I read in your paper this morning that Dr. Ruhland had suggested that the public "avoid overeating the home," "regulate your diet," and "consult your physician immediately when any physical condition arises which seems like a cold."

Washington homes are no longer overheated except in summer. We have to eat what we can get. And the few doctors whom we have left do not have time to work on people who are not really sick.

I note also that the doctor expressed the hope that overeating in street cars would be avoided. Hope springs eternal. DUMBO.

Azores Potentially Important

THE AZORES are potentially important in the defense of the Western Hemisphere. Their geographical position makes them a roughly comparable link between the Atlantic to the Hawaiian Islands in the Pacific. In recent years, our military strategists have never lost sight of them.

If Britain had gone down in 1940 or 1941, almost certainly the United States would have felt compelled to occupy the Azores—possibly in collaboration with Brazil—as an act of self-defense. If Hitler had moved into the Iberian Peninsula or French North and West Africa in the winter of 1941-42 we almost certainly would have had to move into the Azores—as well as into Dakar. Information reached Washington in the summer of 1941 that the drive to the southwest and on to South America was next on Hitler's list after the defeat of Russia. That was what lay behind General Marshall's warning during the debate on the draft extension act that we were in greater peril than ever before.

THE UNEXPECTED determination of Russian resistance compelled Hitler to postpone this drive at least twice, and it was apparently shelved when he decided to resume the offensive in the east in 1942. By then, the direct physical defense of the Western Hemisphere had ceased to be the primary concern of our strategists. The ground-work was being laid for the counter-offensives against the Axis. In this, the Azores were potentially important chiefly as a base for antisubmarine patrol. The region surrounding them was a blind area in Allied coverage of the Atlantic by air reconnaissance. But this utility had to be weighed against action which might have precipitated a German advance into the Iberian Peninsula—and before November, 1942, into French North Africa. Such an advance would seriously have disarranged Allied war plans for 1942 and early 1943. It was a risk which had to be taken and had to be reckoned with even after the landings in French North Africa had been made. It was not until the victory had been won in Tunisia that the Allied command ceased to worry about a German counterthrust through Spain to Gibraltar and across to Spanish Morocco. So, even if the Portuguese had been willing, there were strong reasons against sending Allied forces into the Azores during this period of precarious balance in North Africa and the Mediterranean.

AS ANTISUBMARINE patrol bases, the Azores are possibly less valuable now than they would have been a year or even six months ago. The former blind areas in the Allied air coverage have been filled in by carrier escorts, and the submarines have been brought under pretty effective control, even though recently it has reappeared, fortified apparently by new devices of offense as well as defense. But until the U-boats have been driven from the seas, the measures taken to counter them must be vast and elaborate. The transatlantic traffic in ships, in preparation for the final great offensive against Germany, is increasing. As patrol bases or stations, for both surface and aircraft, the Azores undoubtedly will be put to good use. Also they provide a potential stop-over for air transport during the winter months.

Meanwhile the general trend of the war, and perhaps particularly the collapse of Italy and Allied control of the Mediterranean, have brought a shift in Spain from pro-Axis nonbelligerence to "vigilant neutrality." Spain and Portugal are bound to assist each other in case of attack from a third power. There is no longer any danger that Spain can be compelled to invite the Germans to enter the Iberian Peninsula. If the Germans move, it will obviously be at considerable expense and risk, and with the practical certainty of meeting Allied reinforcements and accomplishing little or nothing.

The formal language managed to accommodate itself to all the odd associations of the war. Portugal, activated an alliance with Great Britain which can be traced back to 1373, while remaining a neutral. Italy, having surrendered unconditionally, becomes a cobelligent, but not an ally.

Whatever the terminology, the essence is the same. The Germans have no real allies left in Europe. Most of the few remaining neutrals are eager or ready to identify themselves with the Allied side whenever they can do so without endangering their own security.

Warworker Food Program Intensified

The War Food Administration announced the formation of an inter-agency committee on food for workers yesterday to speed up expansion of the industrial feeding program wherever feasible.

While in-plant feeding programs already are functioning on a relatively small scale throughout the country, formation of the new committee represents further recognition by the Government of the need for supplying sufficient amounts of food in the proper variety to meet psychological and physiological needs of workers.

Primary Responsibility
WFA has taken over the primary responsibility for program initiation, although participants in the venture are and will be labor, management and other Government agencies.

The War Production Board will prepare a program for materials, equipment, and operating supplies, while the Office of Price Administration will provide sufficient rationed food and maintain reasonable prices.

The War Manpower Commission will determine manpower requirements and be responsible for recruitment, training, and stabilization of employment.

Roy F. Hendrickson, director of the Food Distribution Administration within WFA, has been designated chairman of the inter-agency committee. The committee consists of eight members representing the other concerned agencies.

Most Practical Method
Industrial feeding is believed to be the most practical method of food distribution and control to assure adequate consumption of food by industrial workers, WFA emphasized.

Efforts will be extended, however, to avoid unnecessary duplication or competition with existing, satisfactory feeding establishments in the various communities.

WFA said that requests for assistance in establishing industrial food services are received at FDA regional offices in New York, Chicago, Atlanta, Dallas and San Francisco.

WLB Limits Building Trade Wage Changes

The War Labor Board yesterday limited strictly the types of wage adjustments which may be made for building construction workers and simultaneously reorganized its building trades wage adjustment board.

The action followed some criticism—including a blast from United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis—that the wage adjustment board which operated as a staff unit of the Department of Labor was being too liberal in adjusting the wages of higher bracket building trades mechanics.

The old board was headed by Daniel W. Tracy, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and contained representatives of the government procurement agencies and the AFL building trades unions.

Makeup of New Board

The new board will continue to be headed by Tracy, but will consist of three public members, including Tracy, three labor members chosen from the AFL, and three industry members chosen from the construction industry, rather than from the procurement agencies.

The old board was restricted to handling disputes and wage adjustments involving war construction; the new board was given jurisdiction over all construction activity, both private and public.

WLB prescribed a wage policy for the new board which is more restrictive than the rules followed by WLB itself, presumably because of the high rates of pay generally prevalent in the building trades industry.

New Policy Outlined

Under the new policy, WLB specified that no group of employees is automatically entitled to the full adjustment under the 15 per cent yardstick, and ruled out adjustments above the Little Steel formula to "sound and tested going rates."

Adjustments above Little Steel to correct substandard living—a problem which involves the rates paid common laborers in some areas—were authorized.

In applying the Little Steel formula, WLB directed that generally employees receiving relatively high rates should receive a smaller percentage adjustment than workers in the lower brackets. The full 15 per cent otherwise allowable should be withheld, WLB ordered, where full allowance would destabilize rates in the industry or in the area.

Edgar L. Warren, chief of the review and analysis section of WLB, was given one of the public posts. The third public member will be appointed later, WLB said.

Made Industry Members

Industry members named were: Stephen D. Butts, Detroit, Mich., engineer, and president of the Detroit Building Employers Labor Relations Council; J. S. Miller, Pittsburgh, senior vice president of the Dravo Corp.; Paul N. Geary, Washington, D. C., assistant general manager of the National Electrical Contractors Association.

Labor members named were: Harry C. Bates, president of the International Union of Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers; Herbert Rivers, secretary-treasurer AFL Building Construction Trades department, and Robert Byron, general president of the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association, all of Washington.

113 Dwellings Vacant in One NCHA Project

One of nine projects in the National Capital Housing Authority program to provide demountable duration homes for white war workers, the Georgia Avenue Homes development today has 113 vacancies because there are not enough applicants to meet FHFA eligibility rules, it was said yesterday.

Tenants must be family groups, and occupancy is restricted to certified essential warworkers here since July 1, 1941, or those under a court order requiring them to find other accommodations immediately.

Despite the general laxity of these regulations, only 28 families have moved into the project since its completion three weeks ago today, and only 57 units have been assigned. In all, 170 families could be accommodated.

$622,000 Expenditure

The project, which can be demounted and moved elsewhere at the end of the war, was begun on a vacant lot on Georgia ave., n.w., near the District Line, last June. NCHA temporary shelter funds provided the $622,000 costs. The Georgia ave. homes are complete, except for landscaping and seeding.

Rents, graded in accordance with the income of the occupants, range from $18 to $42 for a one-bedroom unit, $44 for a two-bedroom unit and $46 for a three-bedroom unit. Each tenant is also billed $4.50 monthly for gas and electricity, which is furnished centrally.

Applications may be made by workers through their personnel officers or directly to the War Housing Center.

In another phase of NCHA work, a Senate investigating subcommittee will be led by John Ihlder, executive officer, through more of Washington's slum areas and sites reclaimed under the local housing program. The tour, to be begun tomorrow at 10 a. m., will be the third and last of a series of such investigations to determine the need for more funds for NCHA developments.

Places On Tour

Ihlder will conduct Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio and Capper (Republican) of Kansas through the following projects and alley dwellings:

O'Brien Court, E. st. between 20th and 21st sts. n.w., a demolishable unit now under construction; Jefferson Terrace, K. st. between 6th and 7th sts. s.w., a reclaimed development for white families; alleys extending in a straight line from L to E sts., between 3rd and 4th sts. s.w., and Hopkins pl., the first project developed under the original NCHA program.

A group of Protestant clergymen and housing officials will make still another slum tour, including the Carrollsburg Dwellings, 3rd st., between K and L sts. s.e., today.

Key to Russian Foreign Policy

By Joseph E. Davies

ONE OF the serious difficulties which confront the architects of the postwar world, wherein law will reasonably ensure peace, is the lack of understanding or appreciation of the possible attitude of the Soviet leaders toward the outside world; and what the historical facts are which have created it.

This attitude of the Soviet leaders, just as our own attitude toward Russia is made up from past experiences, the knowledge or lack of knowledge of the facts, and the existence or lack of existence of prejudice in their interpretation.

A condition precedent to any agreement between parties, is reciprocity. There must be an understanding and appreciation of the other man's point of view and each must be willing (and tolerantly) to place himself in the shoes of the other man. This is particularly true in the international field, if the war is going to bring any substantial security for humanity through a cooperative peace.

Anything which serves to clear our understanding, and which informs our public opinion as to what is a service to that end.

The biography of Ambassador Litvinoff by Arthur Upham Pope is a valuable contribution of such material.

Any account of the life of Litvinoff necessarily contains the story of the Russian Revolution and its long, bitter, uphill struggle to secure relations with outside nations, which the power and strength of the Soviet Union entailed it to.

As a matter of fact, Litvinoff's life has been primarily devoted to the political task of serving the cause of the Soviet Union, as interpreted by Josef Stalin, in his efforts to secure recognition of the Soviet Union and of its good faith, and the desire to secure or save international peace. Litvinoff's efforts to that end is a fascinating story. Mistakes, of course, were made by both sides. There were inevitable conflicts of interest. There were what were unquestionably bona fide efforts in good faith. There also was sinister intrigue and deliberate sabotage, with tragic instances of misunderstanding and frustration.

Litvinoff's Efforts
The chronicle of Litvinoff's efforts, accomplishments, and disappointments, interestingly told in this book, affords a key to an interpretation of the possible present attitude and outlook of the leaders of the Soviet Union. As illustrative of the situation, I was reliably informed that as late as June 22, 1941—the day of Hitler's attack upon Russia—there were those in high place in Moscow, who were firmly convinced that the attack was a joint attack of "Capitalist Nations" against the Soviet Union, and that the British Fleet was, at that moment, steaming up the Baltic to cooperate with Hitler in the attack upon the Soviet Union. It was only dispelled when Prime Minister Churchill's famous broadcast, assuring help to the Soviet Union, came over the air that evening. That extraordinary attitude is the better understood in the light of their previous relations with other nations.

The activities of Litvinoff in the Foreign Office, his efforts to secure disarmament and Collective Security, his labors to "stop" Hitler, are probably the best evidence of the basic purpose and concepts which Premier Stalin and his associates were governed by in their relations to the outside world. It is also probably the most reliable.

Now that we have reached a point in this war when everyone proclaims that the attitude of the Soviet leaders may be vital to the security of future peace, a book which provides information of this character becomes indispensable reading for those who are concerned with the present world problem. From that point of view, "Maxim Litvinoff" by Arthur Upham Pope, is one of the most important books of the day. It is a definite contribution to the creation of an intelligent public opinion, which is needed to create and sustain a firm working arrangement for the future.

No matter how much Litvinoff himself might discourage it, it was bound to happen that some one would write an account of his life. He has attracted the admiration and keen interest of our people. The desire for more knowledge as to his personality and the background of his experience, his achievements and his points of view, was particularly widespread and real in this country. It is fortunate, in my opinion, that the biographer in this case should be an author who discloses the perception, scholarship and good judgment, together with the high sense of responsibility, which Dr. Pope brings to his work.

I have known Ambassador Litvinoff for years, possibly as well as any American. In numerous conferences in the conduct of diplomatic negotiations, I had an opportunity to "measure his sword" and to observe both his character and abilities. Before that time, along with many others, I had followed with a keen interest and a continually growing admiration, the powerful statements which he had made in his addresses before the League of Nations, and which he had set forth in his state papers. My later personal contacts corroborated my then opinion, that he was one of the great men of our time.

But what I did not know of Litvinoff, and that which I found of fascinating interest in this book, was much of his private life and the background of his work. Litvinoff is modest and naturally retiring. He does not talk about himself. He also is sincerely modest and believes that his individuality is not important, and should be subordinate to the party organization, which he conceives to be the trustee for the Soviet people and their aspirations. His personal record he regards as of relatively little consequence.

This book gives the unfamiliar account of what, in fact, is an exciting and romantic life. Here appear those forces through the years which combined to temper, refine and strengthen those qualities of courage, high-mindedness, shrewdness, together with the blunt moral integrity and practical idealism which characterize Litvinoff. It is fascinating reading.

This effort to present an account of this career does not pretend to be a definitive, scientific biography. I cannot vouch for all of the facts; nor can I agree with all the interpretations of events as set forth by the author. It is, however, clearly a conscientious attempt, well documented, to give an overall understanding of the career of a man, which has been interwoven with affairs of great moment, and which now has repercussions upon the relations of the Soviet Union to the rest of the world.

An interesting feature of the book is the authoritative manner in which the history of Russia in the last 35 years is unfolded. For in this story of Litvinoff's life there is reflected the story of Russia. I know of no available book which would present to the American public anything like it.

Review of "MAXIM LITVINOFF," by Dr. Arthur Upham Pope (L. B. Fischer, $3.50.)

As a matter of fact, the book is full of facts, interestingly told. It makes clear the progressive reorientation of Russian policy; Stalin's rejection of Trotsky and the latter's plans for instigating a world revolution; the steady progress toward a new nationalism and a new type of internationalism. Some of the darkest and most critical moments in recent history have been reviewed with singular lucidity and completeness. The motivations and results of the Munich appeasement are forcibly stated; the shabby, dishonest face of the Spanish Nonintervention Committee, as forced by the Nazi-Fascist powers and tolerated by some of the democracies, makes interesting and illuminating reading.

Perhaps more interesting still to the average reader is the very full and convincing discussion of the Russian relations with Finland and the much misunderstood Anglo-French negotiations for an alliance with Russia. In connection with the pact with Germany, which so astonished the world, Mr. Pope brings forth some unfamiliar evidence. He clears up some of the misunderstandings about Finland and its relation to the Baltic states. All of these contribute to an understanding of the problems of the peace, which is going to tax the highest capacity of statesmanship. The much vexed problem of the second front is handled with temperate and balanced judgment.

Public Addresses

One of the most valuable parts of the book are the selections from Litvinoff's public addresses. In these the strengths of Litvinoff appear to most advantage. They disclose a firm grip on facts, extraordinary perspicacity, blunt candor, and a caustic humor. His foresight and his occasional asperities in combating the indolence, timidity and selfishness of those who so persistently derided and blocked his projects for collective security, illumined the character of a man who hated fraud, bombast and pious pretensions.

Fortunately, these great speeches are frequently given in full. They afford a mirrored pool, in which there is reflected the monument of a strong soul, a magnificent mind and an altruistic heart. Res ipsa loquitur. The author defends his interpretations in an illuminating postscript which has its own Litvinovian flashes of humor and good sense.

It is a good job, well done, and a valuable contribution to an understanding of the Soviet attitude as to the present, as well as to the future. It is indispensable reading for any one who wishes to understand this new phenomenon in historical evolution—the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

WLB Rejects Transit Raise In Los Angeles

By an unusual 7 to 5 split vote, the War Labor Board yesterday rejected an employer-union agreement to increase the wages of Los Angeles transit workers by 10 cents an hour, but then in a unanimous action, invited management and labor representatives to Washington for a hearing Monday to figure out alternative ways of providing more money for the workers.

Public Member Wayne L. Morse split off from the four-man public bloc for the second time in a major wage case and joined with the four labor members in urging approval of the agreement, Chairman William H. Davis, Vice Chairman George W. Taylor and Public Member Frank P. Graham joined the industry bloc to turn down the proposed increase—which was demanded to solve an acute manpower problem in the coast city.

Davis, at a specially-called press conference, announced the unanimous decision to call the Monday meeting, but failed to mention the split vote on the original issue.

It was understood that the board will seek a management-labor agreement providing additional compensation by settling such questions as purchase of watches and uniforms, training wages, working hours, overtime rates, shift rates and possible adjustment of so-called "intra-plant inequities."

Davis said the board felt the proposed increase would not solve the manpower problems, making it difficult for the transit companies to meet schedules.

The action represented the second time the board turned down the Los Angeles agreement—proposed by the Los Angeles Railway Corporation, the Los Angeles Motor Coach Lines and the Association of Street and Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees, AFL.

Morse dissented in a 7 to 5 decision when the board denied an increase to Southern California aircraft workers and restricted Seattle, Wash., employees of the Boeing Aircraft Co. to the amount allowed under the Little Steel formula.

Subsequently, WLB reopened the Boeing case at the request of the War Production Board and approved a reclassification of wage rates which provided substantial wage increases to most employees.

There have been indications that the indirect approach favored by the board majority (and accepted by the board minority after their direct approach was rejected) will become the accepted means of dealing with so-called "rare and unusual cases" where strict application of board policies would aggravate production and manpower problems. The indirect approach in effect leaves existing board policies undisturbed by handing down decisions which cannot be used effectively as precedents for the granting of other wage adjustments.

U.S. Research Plan Urged By Wallace

By the Associated Press

Vice President Wallace urged yesterday establishment of a great government scientific research agency to maintain "a constant flow of new ideas and industries" into the postwar economy and promote full employment and full use of productive resources.

Unless the Government engages in research, he told a Senate Military Subcommittee, free enterprise in an age of helicopters, television, light metals, plastics and new foods may be "shackled and restrained" by concentration in a few corporations of control over new inventions.

"The application of modern science," he said, "should not be the exclusive domain of great corporations and cartels who can, if they desire, restrict and suppress new inventions and scientific information to suit their own interests instead of the public interest."

Small Business Need

"Small business cannot support the large and costly laboratories which are necessary for modern industrial research. To fill this need Government must make available these facilities."

The committee is considering a bill by Senator Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia for a Government office of scientific and technical mobilization. Kilgore proposes that the agency have wide powers to finance and encourage scientific developments as well as engaging in research itself. In addition, the agency would have authority in time of war to mobilize scientific and technical manpower and take over rights to patents necessary for prosecution of the war.

Wallace told the committee that enemy patents seized by the Alien Property Custodian should remain the property of the Government and be made available to all business.

"Every business and institution," he added, "should have full access to all patents and research findings which have been developed at Government expense."

Advantage Over Europe

Discussing the possible effect of Government industrial research in raising the standard of living, Wallace said the average American farm worker produces about five times the crops of the average European peasant, largely because of Government sponsored agricultural research.

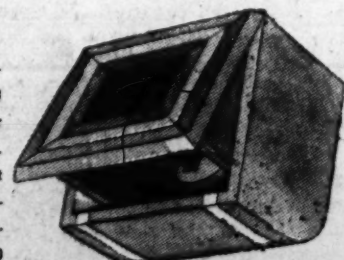

Already a flood of discoveries with vast industrial possibilities is coming out of wartime laboratories, he said, adding:

"When the veil of secrecy imposed by war is lifted our people will stand amazed at the array of inventions. A new world is being fashioned in our laboratories."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Comes tonight a home-grown lightweight fight between Danny Petro and Lew Hanbury at Uline's Arena, and it ought to be a haul. Nothing fancy as far as any title is concerned, just a brawl that either kid would hate to lose.

POVICH

The Petro and the Hanburys don't get along well, to start with. It was four years ago in the amateur Golden Gloves tournament that Lew Hanbury was licking the daylights out of Charley Petro when three more of the Petro brothers jumped into the ring at Turner's Arena and tried to square matters for Brother Charley.

Hanbury backed away from that Petro mob, but dared them all to come at him, one by one. Tonight he's in there against Danny, and a 2 to 1 favorite to win despite the wallop in Danny's left hand.

The Petro-Hanbury fight is the most intriguing fist affair between a pair of local characters since 1926 when Promoter Goldie Ahearn, then a lightweight, crawled through the ropes at Kenilworth, Md., against Al Foreman, a soldier out of Fort Myer. That fight drew $12,000. They carried Ahearn out two minutes later with Foreman the winner by a first-round knockout.

Like Ahearn in that fight, Petro is the southpaw in tonight's battle. A few months ago, he was regarded as a sturdier sort than Hanbury with a more rosy fist future, but came his fight with the colored boy, Jackie Wilson, and Petro's stock skipped fast. Wilson gave him a boxing lesson and they had to stop the fight with Petro a gory mess.

Hanbury, too, seemed headed for bigger purses until he also met Wilson. He got the same treatment Petro had been handed, and a badly cut left eye caused the fight to be stopped. But Hanbury, while he was in there, made a better battle of it against Wilson than did Petro.

Since that defeat, however, Hanbury has recouped some of his prestige. Under the aegis of Al Weill, who has ready entry into the Garden, Hanbury has fought two bouts in New York and won them convincingly. He beat no great names in Frankie Rubino and Gus Levine, but he stopped the latter, and left ringside fans gibbering over his prospects.

Even Promoter Mike Jacobs was smitten with the busy style of Hanbury and is awaiting only the proper opponent to put Hanbury in a Garden main bout. Hanbury is now the darling of the Weill stable. Well regards him as the successor to Lew Ambers who won the world lightweight title under Weill.

If there is a knockout tonight, though, Petro will probably score it. Danny boy is the hard hitter. In fact, it was Petro's one hard punch of the fight that prompted Jackie Wilson to knock him out a few months ago. Wilson was winning all the way and was content to win on points when all of a sudden Petro clipped him in the ninth round. "After that, I decided to knock him out," said Wilson in his dressing room. "I was willing to let him stay, but there was no sense taking a chance with a boy who can hit like that. He hurt me."

Hanbury will have a 6-or-7-pound pull in the weights tonight, coming in at 135 pounds while Danny is expected to scale about 128. Petro's southpaw style may not be troublesome to Hanbury who is not a very exaggerated right-hander himself. Hanbury's pattern of fighting will probably be unchanged. He'll do most of the leading, taking care to hold his right hand high, else he might feel Petro's left.

Petro, winner or loser, is a favorite with Washington fans, because he's always dangerous. His latest demonstration occurred a couple of weeks ago when he was getting licked by Johnny Cockerfield. Petro won the fight on a ninth-round knockout.

It's an important fight for both Hanbury and Petro. Hanbury's Garden ideas will take a wallop if he can't beat Petro, with Mike Jacobs doubtless telling him to clean up his own back yard before he comes into the Garden. Petro was top dog among Washington lightweights until Hanbury came along. He'd like to regain that position.

From War Correspondent Bob Considine, now in England, comes a letter. He says: "Life here has been instructive. The people, cities and means are on the threshold side, but this is a wonderful, doughy race. There are kids running unconcerned about the streets who have been subjected to more bombing and who have heard more guns than many of our generals combined."

"You have to queue up for just about everything here. The people go out of their ways to help the Americans. They even stand the ball games in Hyde Park and sit all the way through them though not one in 50 spectators knows what the hell is going on."

Undeclared Coolidge Meets Eastern Today

The unbeaten Coolidge Colts face a new threat to their victory streak in the interhigh football series when they meet Eastern High at 4 p. m. today at Eastern, for the Ramblers showed unexpected power in defeating favored Western in their last go.

Coolidge started off the season with a bang, knocking off Wilson, 6-0, followed it up with a 12-0 victory over Tech, but with two of its best backfield men out, lost to George Washington High in Alexandria last week. Those two men won't be out this week, however, and Coolidge should make a good showing against the rejuvenated Easterners, who dropped their initial game to Roosevelt, 15 to 7.

Western's game with Anacostia also should be a good one, for both teams have won and lost one game apiece and need victories to stay in the series running. Anacostia's "Flam" Flaherty is steadily improving in the accuracy of his passes, which were good to begin with, and though Western's pass defense was amply demonstrated against Tech, the Raiders will have their hands full over on the Anacostia Flats this afternoon.

Another afternoon game finds Tech pitted against the strong St. John's Prep team at its home stadium, while Central will meet its old rival from across the Potomac, Washington and Lee, at Griffith Stadium at 8 p. m.

Spot game of the week at Central Stadium at 4 p. m. Saturday pits series-leader Roosevelt against Wilson, still considered a contender, despite its defeat by Coolidge and tie by Tech.

Gonzaga Meets Geo. Prep

One of the top prep school games of the season is expected between Gonzaga and Georgetown Prep, the first meeting between the schools in five years. Devitt will play Mercersburg Academy at Mercersburg, Pa., and Bullis Prep will journey to Cumberland for a game with La Salle High. St. Albans will open its season against Charlotte Hall here and Landon will play St. James.

George Washington High, Alexandria, will play its first game away from home with Fredericksburg High.

Burch Won By Cape Cod At Pimlico

Eddie Arcaro Brings Victor Home by Two And a Half Lengths; Pays $10 Ticket

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 14.—Cape Cod, inconsistent son of Bostonian, was wearing his running shoes today and bounced off with the chief money in the W. P. Burch Memorial Handicap, the day's $7500 added feature transferred here from Bowie. Second to H. G. Bedwell's Solitare in the Capital Handicap opening day, Cape Cod came back this afternoon to race Solitare into submission and to go on to take chief money of $7050 in the test of 6 furlongs involving 12 sprinters.

The Calumet Farm's Quilen Es was second, beaten 2 1/2 lengths, with Cassis, carrying the Howe Stable colors, in third position and a length and a half away from the place. Cape Cod, banned at Laurel for flip-flop performance last year, returned a $10 mutual today and was clocked in 1:12 over the fast but dull oval.

Arcaro Up on Winner

Jockey Eddie Arcaro had the G. C. Greer representative off alertly and, with Cherrydale, he forced the pace of Solitare. Cherrydale quit approaching the stretch and Collure began bearing out, taking Cape Cod with him. Arcaro finally shook off the tiring Bedwell colt and then went into a strong ride that carried Cape Cod into a safe lead. Quilen Es and Cassis saved ground entering the stretch and closed gamely.

The program provided a $239.10 payoff in the daily double. A. Russ' Sky Soldier won the first race by a head margin from Well Allright, with Conquer third. This winner paid $36.70 in his own right and set the stage for the large "double" mutual. C. S. Howard's Sea Convey, a son of Seabiscuit, won the second race to the tune of a $9.30 mutual and was the first of three winners for Jockey Arcaro.

Rollo Wins 'Chase

The day's steeplechase went to the Rokeby Stables' Rollo as a gift. National Anthem, the favorite, and Kellsboro were staging a duel out in front. At the twelfth fence, Kellsboro lost rider and at the thirteenth National Anthem's boy also tumbled. Rollo led Fieldfare into the wire, with Emma's Pet third. The winner paid $5.60.

Trainer Bowes Bond should send the Howe Stable a bill. He saved Segadora from serious injury when the colt straddled the fence on the way to the post for the second race. . . Those horsemen who learned on the half-mileers are always useful in such spots. . . Peg Hanna once saved Pendered, owned by Bond and the trainer was badly scratched up. . . John J. Leonard, old time Maryland horseman, died last Wednesday. . . He was the father of former jockeys Joe and Roger Leonard and of William Leonard, currently a valet at this track. . . R. W. McIlvaine's, The Man nearly fell in his race last Wednesday and received minor cuts. . . The Man should win at this track and is worth remembering. . . William Ellis, the New Orleans sportsman who paid oodles and oodles of money for yearlings, is here. . . I know several hunch players who play horses with war names. How about today's $239.10 daily double on Sky Soldier and Sea Convey. . . Some of the old timers say that steeplechasing resulted in bringing flat racing back to Maryland. . . A few more of those things like today's jumping race may result in taking the sport out of Maryland. . . Whitey Abel has given up trying to get Honey Cloud, his big-money winner back to action. . . Steeplechase jockey R. Burns was lucky today. His boot was cut from one end to the other but he escaped with a bruised ankle. . . If Marlboro can hold a meeting, why not shift the whole show to Bowie. As far as being off the transportation paths one is as bad as the other. . . This track will be much faster after it gets some rain. . . Hundreds of tons of sand were mixed with the loam and the soil is now loose. . . Quick Draw was claimed today by C. C. Greer and Son for $3500.

National Capital Field Trials Set Today, Tomorrow

The National Capital Field Trial Club will stage its thirty-first annual field trial at W. A. Julian's farm, on Falls Road, between Potomac and Rockville, today and tomorrow. Competition starts at 8 a. m. both days.

A trio of stakes—Derby, All Age and Shooting Dogs—will be run, with the Thomas P. Baldwin Memorial trophy going to the winner of the Shooting Dog stake. Trophies will also go to winners of the other divisions. Trials will be held with both liberated and native Bob White quail.

Ample parking space provides full view of the trials, and the public is invited to attend.

Player Rejected

Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., Oct. 14 (AP). Andy Seminick, Philadelphia Phillies' catcher who starred for the Knoxville Smokies during the early part of the 1943 season, has been rejected by the Army, the induction station here reported today, for medical reasons.

Cow Jumps Over Moon—Horse Can't Get Over Fence

It was a two-way scratching at Pimlico yesterday for Segadora. The horse, frisking about on the way to the post for the second race, threw a hind leg over the rail. Segadora was scratched from the race and on the leg. Jockey Nick Wall, dejectedly walking towards his mount at, was to have ridden but, of course, didn't.

Lew Worsham Beats Byrd In Sweepstakes

The Anglo-American entente scored again yesterday. This time it was on the field of sport at the Chevy Chase Country Club where Lieut. Comdr. Patrick Stone of the Royal British Navy teamed admirably with Maj. Andrew Saul, United States Army, to win the fourteenth annual Pro-Senior Golf Tournament.

Lew Worsham of Burning Tree played spectacular par golf to win the Professional Sweepstakes from Sammy Byrd, winner of the All-American Tournament. Worsham nosed out Byrd on the eighteenth green, sinking a 12-foot putt, for a birdie three, while Sammy required three putts for a five on the hole. Worsham posted a par 69 to win. Byrd carded a 70.

Under the tournament rules, the pros played off the back tees, while the amateurs were permitted to fire from the front mark.

First Time in History

The team of Commander Stone and Major Saul was not only unusual from the timely international aspect, but also because it marked the first time in the tourney's history in which a pair of amateurs captured the top prize.

Major Saul is a member of Chevy Chase Club and Commander Stone is affiliated with the Royal Mid-Surrey Golf Club of London. This marked the naval officer's first competitive golf since the outbreak of the war.

The winners posted a net card of 144 to defeat host Pro Bob Barnett and Charles Hawley by a 5-stroke margin. Commander Stone played a steady game, carding a 39 in both rounds for a 78. Major Saul bagged a 45-41, 86, and the pair were aided by a handicap of 20.

Joe Kirkwood, after posting a 37-37, 74, for fourth place in the pro race, entertained the gallery with his amazing repertoire of trick shots. Interspersed with his highly unorthodox club-wielding was a rapid-fire line of chatter which made pointed reference to his recent feud with Walter Hagen.

In winning the Professional Sweepstakes, Worsham played a steady game to upset the highly-regarded Byrd, who just recently lost a challenge match to Harold McSpaden for the unofficial "golfer of the year" title. Both men filed a 36 for the out nine, but Worsham's sharpshooting on the way home proved the margin.

Even for Three Holes

Coming in, they were even-steven for the first three holes, then Byrd forged ahead by two strokes when he took a 2 and 3, respectively, on the 13th and 14th holes as against Worsham's 3 and 4. Lew cut the lead to a single stroke with a 4 on the 16th, as against Byrd's 5.

They halved the 17th and then Worsham turned on the heat. He won the green in two strokes and sunk a 12-foot putt for a birdie. Byrd also hit the green in two, but then ran into difficulty with his short game and three-putted the hole to lose.

Skins Depart For Green Bay Game Sunday

The Redskins left yesterday for Milwaukee and what may be their most important game of the season. . . Sunday's engagement with the Green Bay Packers.

Packer Coach Curly Lambeau has come up with what looks to be the best despite the loss of Cecil Isbell and the fact that only one of the Green Bay draft choices is still with the team.

With only two weeks work, the Packers beat the Redskins in Baltimore, 23-21, and they have come a long way since that time, although the Redskins are also a much better ball club at present than in their Baltimore exhibition game showings. The game may be a preview of the championship playoff.

The rivals have not played a league game since 1941 in Washington when the Redskins took a 17-0 lead at halftime only to see Don Hutson put on one of the greatest shows of his career in the second half when Green Bay came back to score 22 points and win, 22-17. They have divided exhibition games in 1942 and '43.

Cosch Dutch Bergman hopes to get in a workout late this afternoon in Milwaukee as the team did not practice Monday, drilled only lightly Tuesday and had its only thorough workout of the week Wednesday. Train time prevented a workout yesterday due to the "Skins" morning jobs and if the team is forced into idleness today Bergman will send the "Skins" through their stiffest Saturday drill in several years tomorrow. Saturday is usually used for a chase around the park and running through a few signals.

Minus Joe Gibson, who did not make the trip due to a charley horse which makes it impossible for him to run, the Redskins took 26 players, their smallest traveling squad in years.

Jack Jenkins left the team last Sunday but he will probably be replaced as the Redskins have a trade or two in the offing.

Taylor Scores Kayo at Drum

Hal Taylor featured the card of five National Training School bouts held last night at Fort Drum, Md., scoring a technical kayo over Bob Bernhardt in the 147-pound class in 54 seconds of the second round. The results:

118-lb. class—William Colon defeated John Kelly.
125-lb. class—Don Carter defeated William Fagan.
130-lb. class—Ted McIntosh defeated Junior Smith.
147-lb. class—Hal Taylor scored TKO over Robert Bernhardt, 54 seconds of second round.
160-lb. class—Bill Davidson defeated Emmett Crala.

Six Middies to Miss Battle Against Lions

Annapolis, Oct. 14.—The injury jinx hovered over the Navy football camp today, as Capt. John E. Wheelchel, the Middies' head coach, reported that six of his varsity backs and linemen would not play in the game Saturday against Penn State's Nittany Lions.

Injury in the Duke game last week in Baltimore were Al Channell, left end and captain of the undefeated Tars, and star backs Jim Pettit, Bob Jenkins and Bruce Smith.

"That game against the Blue Devils last Saturday was the best, and most strenuous test that Navy has had yet, and it showed up plenty of weak points—in the line and in the backfield," Wheelchel declared.

"And meeting Duke may have cost us, temporarily, the services of four Middies. But we'll be able to field a team against Penn," he continued, "that won't make us look too bad."

"In fact, we'll give them plenty of scrapping," John Hansen, a 180-pound end from South Orange, N. J., will be in the starting lineup in place of Channell, he said.

Other injured members of the Navy squad this season are Ed Elliott and Walt Schwartz. Elliott, a right tackle, sustained injuries in preseason practices, and Schwartz filled the spot against North Carolina Preflight and Cornell.

Schwartz, in turn, was injured in the latter game, and Al Staubitz started last week in his place. With these casualties a reality, the Middies were held to light drills today, to save at least the remaining 13 backs for heavy work against the Lions.

Bass Now Moving In Potomac; Good Catches Recorded

The bass have moved into the Potomac waters around Fletcher's Boat House—Stop 10 on the Cabin John streetcar line—in good numbers during the past week and some nice catches have been recorded, most of them on minnows, but some on dropped spoons and spinners, a few on deep-running plugs.

Julie Fletcher caught a 4 1/2-pound brookbass recently and another party came in with four nice bass a couple of days ago. Current hot spot for bass fishing, however, is Ocoquan Creek. Va., large numbers of good-sized bass have been taken for a couple of weeks, with the Johnson gold minnow the favored bait.

Will Draw Highest Pay In History

New Position Puts Him a Step Nearer Front-Office Job With Detroit Club

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Stanley R. (Bucky) Harris, who managed major league baseball clubs for 20 years, stepped down to the minors today to accept a contract to pilot the Buffalo International League team for 1944 and said he was happy to do so.

The former major league "boy wonder" who guided the Washington Nationals to the American League pennant and the World Series championship in 1924 will be the "highest paid manager" in minor league baseball, the Buffalo club's General Manager John C. Stiglmeyer said.

Although declining to disclose the contract terms, Stiglmeyer asserted that Harris would receive a large bonus and the highest salary ever paid a Buffalo manager.

Harris "Very Happy" Now

Harris, 47 years old, who was discharged as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies in the National League last July said he was "very happy to be back in Buffalo after 25 years." He recalled his playing days with Buffalo from 1917 until 1919 when he began his major league career with the Senators.

He declared that the Buffalo club had agreed to release him should a major league offer present itself and he chose to accept it. He added he would make every effort to improve the Buffalo team which finished seventh this year.

Harris Step Nearer Tigers' Front Office

Bucky Harris' acceptance of the job as manager of the Buffalo club is a step toward a position with the Detroit Tigers, who have a working agreement with Buffalo. The Post has learned.

Harris has been under consideration for an executive job with the Detroit club which will retain Steve O'Neill as manager.

The provision in Harris' contract with Buffalo which enables him to accept an offer from a major league club also makes him available for the job of managing the Brooklyn Dodgers, for which he has been mentioned.

The monetary consideration of the Buffalo offer prompted Harris to accept that job pending other offers. At Buffalo he will be paid a salary equal to the pay he received as manager of the Phillies last season, plus a bonus arrangement that steps up his pay $2000 for increased attendance at Buffalo in 1944.

Harris' salary at Buffalo could range as high as $18,000 for the season as a result of the bonus arrangements.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

What WMC Rules Mean to You

Here's what the new War Manpower Commission regulations will mean to you and what you can do about them. First, you're frozen a little harder in your Federal job. You'll be required to wait at least 60 days after you're off the Federal payroll before you can take another job unless you can get a certificate of availability. You will automatically get the certificate if you're released, otherwise you must prove "undue personal hardship." The United States Employment Service now will take a hand in placing Federal workers who possess critical skills. Moreover, the employment service will attempt to get placements for people in Government whose highest skills aren't being utilized in their present jobs.

Now if you're one of the many Federal workers who plan to resign—whatever the reason may be—here's what you should do: First, go to your personnel office and tell your story, but be sure and give your office plenty of notice, at least two weeks. If you have a good personal reason—health or family—your personnel office may be perfectly willing to give you a release. But your agency won't want to lose you—if you're a good employee—and an attempt will be made to arrange a job for you wherever you're going. But if your agency can't place you, the Civil Service Commission is given 14 days—that's why ample notice is important—to get you placed in any other Federal agency in the city where you're moving. After 14 days you'll be given your release automatically.

You Can Appeal

Now your excuse for resigning may not constitute "undue personal hardship" in the eyes of your personnel department, and you'll be refused a release. If you believe your reasons are valid, you should appeal at once to the Civil Service Commission. Send your appeal, preferably in writing, to: Fred Brown, chief of the War Transfer Unit, 808 E st. n. w. Interviews will be given. Brown has authority to overrule your agency and give you a release. And if you can't get a release out of Brown, you have the right to take your case to the United States Employment Service, as it, too, can give you a certificate of availability.

Your skill may not be fully utilized or you may have only enough work to keep you busy half the time and you may want to quit in disgust. Hereafter, the Civil Service Commission would give you a release if your charges could be proved. Now, however, the commission must first try to get you a job of your highest skill, but if it fails it can't give you a release and it must refer you to the Employment Service which will certify you to a specific job. (That sounds complicated.) War Manpower several weeks ago published a list of critical jobs—jobs for which there is a shortage of workers. Now if you are one of these jobs, even if you are given a certificate of availability you can't take another job until you are referred to a specific job by the Employment Service. In other words, the Employment Service from now on will ration available manpower among the critical jobs.

Postwar Blueprint

Wednesday and again yesterday a group of presidential advisers sat at a White House table drawing a blueprint of a postwar agency that will be charged with the responsibility of converting the Nation back to peacetime operation when the war ends. On one point the planners appear to have agreed: that the agency should be made a part of the White House staff. Moreover, it's now believed that the order creating the agency will be made very soon. Several weeks ago the prevailing opinion was that it would be based for morale to announce the postwar agency. Officials were afraid people would think the war was about over. However, the people also believe plans should be made now for demobilization. Samuel Rosenman is chairman of the group that has been drawing up plans for the post-war bureau.

Jim King, OPA's fourth director of information, has quit. He'll be succeeded for the time being by Jim Rogers, an advertising man. Keith Kohls of the Quartermaster General's Office, has been awarded $25 for her suggestion on handling mail in her storage and distribution division. Sam Kuehler, chief of the accounts and audits branch at WPA, is doing an excellent job delivering war bonds to employees. He has developed an excellent system that other agencies could profit by copying. The WPA decentralization of authority gets under way today. Field offices may now act on applications of any facility requirement up to $10,000. Some 50 persons will be cut out of the construction division here as a result. However, headquarters of the division will be headquartered. The Senate has approved a bill which would give postmasters the power to change clocks and carriers.

A coroner's inquest will be held this morning into the death of Walter Davis, 55, of 1708 F st. n. w., former auditor of the Maritime Commission, who died early yesterday of injuries received in the 3300 block of Benning rd. n. e., when he was struck by a Capital Transit streetcar, operated by Franklin M. Watkins, 36, of 1725 Trinidad ave. n. e.

Under Arrest

At the time of the accident Davis, who was intoxicated, was under arrest by a defense guard, Louis Anderson, Negro, 34, of 1424 F st. n. e., after he had been released by Anderson from a west-bound streetcar, police said. Anderson, who was stationed on Benning Bridge, said the west-bound streetcar stopped and the operator asked him to take Davis off the car. He said he took him off with the help of the operator and helped him over to the north sidewalk of Benning rd. From there he started to walk with the man toward the patrol box across the street.

When they reached the concrete platform along the car tracks, Davis, who weighs approximately 200 pounds, fell on the westbound tracks, Anderson said. Anderson picked him up and he fell again. When he tried to pick him up the second time, he said, he saw a streetcar approaching and tried to flag the operator, Franklin M. Watkins, 35, 1725 Trinidad ave. n. e. Then he tried to drag Davis off the tracks, but the man was too heavy. Davis was struck by the streetcar, dragged about 15 feet and then thrown to the side, according to police.

Unable to Stop in Time

Watkins, who has had 8½ years driving experience, said he saw something white on the tracks but couldn't stop the car quickly enough because of the slippery tracks.

Davis was removed to Emergency Hospital in their ambulance and died about an hour later. Lieut. David S. Marr, 35, USNR, of 2702 Wisconsin ave. n. w., and Miss Freda Cofran of 3200 16th st. n. w., were injured last night when their car ran into a heavy ICC truck in the 2500 block of Massachusetts ave. n. w. at 10 p. m. Both were unconscious when taken to Emergency Hospital where their condition was called "undetermined" by hospital officials.

OWI Worker Injured

Sarah M. Reis, 53, of Barton Hall, Potomac Heights, an OWI employee was taken to the loading platform at Maine ave. and M st. s. w., yesterday, when she attempted to board a one-man Capital Transit streetcar, operated by Harry Sanford of 2209 S st. s. w., through the rear door. Police said, the door closed as she started to enter the car.

She was admitted to Casualty Hospital.

Inspector Assigned to Bakeries

A Health Department inspector has been assigned specifically to check sanitary conditions in bakeries. Dr. R. R. Ashworth, chief of the Food Inspection Division, disclosed yesterday that the maximum penalty in Municipal Court.

"There are 250 bakeries in the District, and we consider this class of food handlers fully as important as restaurateurs and grocers," Dr. Ashworth said.

Sam Hinkle, baker, at 1323 7th st. n. w., was fined $25 on charges of having a dirty floor and shelves, an open flour container, dirty roll cutter, a case of cracked eggs on the floor, and a dirty toilet.

Harry Wanner, baker at 811 Market pl. n. w., was fined $25 for having rat feces on window sills, behind boxes and barrels, under work tables, at the base of mixers

Grand Jury to Report Findings Monday on Shooting Last July

An attractive 23-year-old woman, paralyzed since July 19 when a bullet entered her spine, was wheeled into Municipal Court yesterday to testify before the grand jury against Francis E. Slattery, 22, of 806 7th st. s. w., who was accused of the shooting.

"I want the whole world to know it was just an accident," Mrs. Ruth V. Merriman told reporters. "I have nothing in the world against Francis."

Mrs. Merriman was shot, police said, while she and Slattery were in the kitchen of her home at 1210 8th st. s. w. She resides there with her mother. Her husband is stationed in the Army in Alabama.

After she appeared as a Government witness before the grand jury hearing charges of assault with a dangerous weapon against Slattery, Assistant United States Attorney John W. Diamond said the shooting occurred while Slattery was unloading a .35-caliber, Spanish-type revolver. The grand jury will not report before Monday.

As Mrs. Merriman, who said she had been informed she may never walk again, was being placed in an ambulance to be taken back to Walter Reed Hospital, she said: "We were sort of kidding. That was all. And when I got up, the gun went off. Please tell everybody that Francis is a very good friend of the family and certainly was not at fault."

She then clasped Slattery's hand and smiled.

Yesterday was the first time Mrs. Merriman has left the hospital since the shooting occurred. She has been married six years.

Service Center Will Cost $100,000, Survey Shows

A voluntary survey by the Smaller War Plants Corporation of facilities available for transient service men in the vicinity of Union Station show that appropriation of $100,000 would be adequate to care for 400 men, it was announced yesterday by Representative Tolan (Democrat) of California.

Tolan, who several weeks ago introduced a resolution providing that the Senate garage be converted as sleeping quarters for soldiers and sailors, declared: "It seems to me that with the billions of dollars we are spending all over the world to win this war, we can afford another $100,000 to supplement the facilities of the United Nations Service Center and make sure that the morale of our boys is not lowered by their treatment right here in Washington."

He added that he will "move vigorously and at once to bring about either the conversion of the Senate garage or the erection of facilities on the Government land immediately adjacent to the station."

Carroll Death Data Given D. C. Chiefs

A report filed with Commissioner Guy Mason on the death of Addie Mae Carroll, 42, former Gallinger Hospital nurse, showed that Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said she had died of diabetes, while appended affidavits from Gallinger physicians cited case history of tuberculosis and mental trouble.

Dr. MacDonald's signed death certificate, a photostatic copy of which was attached to the report, showed Miss Carroll had died at Casualty, March 24—ten days after her discharge from Gallinger—and that a report submitted with the autopsy report showed diabetes as the cause of the death. The photostatic copy also showed that he had made an examination for drugs, but stated the chemical analysis was negative.

Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, filed the report at the request of Commissioner Mason. Seckinger made no statement of any findings he had made. He simply attached copies of affidavits from Gallinger doctors and on top of them the photostatic copy of the death certificate.

Filing affidavits were Drs. C. P. Cake of the tuberculosis ward, and Joseph L. Gilbert, chief psychiatrist, the removal of both of whom was recommended in a formal report on Gallinger filed by Senators Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota and Buck (Republican) of Delaware.

Dr. Gilbert told how Miss Carroll suffered from mental trouble. Dr. Cake told of her diagnosis as having tuberculosis.

Another report by another doctor told of having been at Casualty the night she was brought there and of having decided she was in a diabetic coma. However, he said, she failed to respond to treatment for the coma.

The reports from the physicians showed Miss Carroll had first been a nurse in the psychopathic ward and after it was known she was dissatisfied with the work, had been transferred to the tubercular ward. While there she showed symptoms of ill health and her malady was diagnosed as tuberculosis. She was then confined to the ward and, the affidavits said, showed a state of mental irregularity which warranted putting her in the psychopathic ward. Several times, in the affidavits, it was stated, she had expressed the intention of committing suicide.

Group Asks Retention of Dr. Ruhland

McCarran to Call Meeting on Report; Hygiene Society Backs Health Officer

By Anne Hagner

Post Staff Writer

Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee yesterday declared that he will call a meeting of the committee "at the earliest possible date" for consideration of a subcommittee report on Gallinger Hospital.

Meanwhile, the executive committee of the District of Columbia Hygiene Society yesterday adopted a resolution urging that Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, be retained in office. McCarran said he had hoped to schedule a meeting of the committee for Monday or Tuesday, but that several members had told him that they would be unable to attend.

The report, which recommended the immediate dismissal of Commissioner Guy Mason, Dr. Ruhland, Gallinger Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock and two other physicians at the institution, was submitted to the Nevada Senator Wednesday by Senators Bushfield of South Dakota, Buck of Delaware and Holman of Oregon, all Republicans.

Drastic Denunciation

This triumvirate, headed by Holman, made the most drastic denunciation in congressional history concerning District officials, charging that Mason's supervision over Gallinger was "in name only" and that "although he has known of the complaints against the administration of Gallinger for a considerable length of time, he has taken no steps to correct the situation."

Concurring in the Senate subcommittee's recommendation to do away with the "Civil War" buildings at Gallinger, the Hygiene Society committee "nevertheless pointed to Dr. Ruhland's administration as one that 'has built up and greatly improved the city's public health structure—notably the nursing, sanitary, laboratory, hospital, and infant and maternal hygiene services.'"

"Despite the handicaps incurred by the health officer largely because of inherent weaknesses in the District's present form of government, which have resulted in inadequate appropriations and support and their corollaries, lack of funds, personnel and facilities, Dr. Ruhland has been able so to guard Washington's health as to protect its greatly increased population."

Representative Bolton Speaks

On the floor of the House, Representative Francis Bolton (Republican) of Ohio said: "I would like to suggest to the House that before we dispose of men (as recommended in the Gallinger report) who have a reputation throughout the country as being among the first in their profession, we take some of the responsibility because we have not given the District adequate funds. I would like very much to recommend to the House that a thoughtful study of the situation."

In addition to Dr. Bocock, the Senators also recommended the dismissal of Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, chief psychiatrist, and Dr. Charles P. Cake, head of the tubercular department, but emphasized that Dr. Bocock was directly responsible for their supervision.

McCarran, who gave unofficial approval of the report as soon as he had given it what he described as "a hurried reading," declared that he regretted the delay in holding a full committee meeting but would attempt to gather together all members as soon as possible.

4 Federal Workers, 1 Woman Arraigned On Lottery Counts

Four employees of the Old House Office Building and a woman habitué of the Capitol Building were arraigned before Commissioner Turnage on charges of operating a lottery and, in the case of one, setting up a gaming table, police reported yesterday. All five were placed under $1,500 bond pending a hearing October 20.

Those arraigned were Preston Green, 71, of 801 P st. n. w., employed as a masseur, who was charged with setting up the gaming table; Thomas L. Robinson, 35, of 1021 13th st. n. w., employed as a janitor; Louis Hall, 53, of 1905 19th st. n. w., employed as a messenger; Bruce Cornell Reid, 41, of 221 F st. n. w., employed as a laborer, all three of whom were charged with operating a lottery and possessing number slips. The four men were picked up in the Old House Office Building.

The woman, Frances Tye, 31, of 225 Virginia ave. s. e., who was arrested in the locker room in the basement of the Capitol, was charged with operating a lottery.

Civic Group Flag Honors 69 in Service

A service flag, representing 69 members of the District Federation of Civic Associations, was dedicated and presented to Commissioner John Russell Young by Dr. E. F. Harris, president, at ceremonies in the Interior Department auditorium last night.

Representative Dawson (Democrat) of Illinois, the only Negro Congressman, spoke to the assembly of some 200 persons, who represented the 22 associations affiliated with the federation.

In a speech praising the "fine cooperation" he has found during his administration among the leaders of the Washington Negro community, Commissioner Young accepted the flag.

Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, spoke extemporaneously after being presented with a check for $105.85 for the Metropolitan Police Band by Dr. C. Herbert Marshall. He pointed to the appointment record of the Police Department under his direction and declared that there were 128 Negroes in his department at present, compared with 44 at the time he took over.

Frank C. Walker Leads 400 Blood Donors

Led by Frank C. Walker, Postmaster General, and his daughter, Laura Hallie, more than 400 persons answered appeals of the American Red Cross Blood Donor Center, to give a total of 302 pints of blood, yesterday.

The amount did not include donations made to the mobile blood unit of the center which, late last night was still courting the countryside on its daily travel.

In addition to the amount taken at the center in response to appeals were dozens of pints from Government workers who appeared on regular schedule to make their donations.

Enforcement Of New Labor Rules Mapped

A "plan of action" was evolved by War Manpower Commission Area Director Fred Z. Hetzel yesterday to assure strict enforcement of the labor controls which have become effective today with the new manpower stabilization plan.

Envisaging increased use of the United States Employment Service as hiring agency for critical and migratory workers, the plan may be adapted to arising needs and, under circumstances, assume the proportions of the absolute manpower controls.

Charles E. Farmer, District USES director, said yesterday that he does not expect any difficulties in handling the added burden "unless a number of restricted activities" are created at one time. At present, only the shoe repair industry is in that category. Together with 12 previously established "local shortage occupations" and workers who are on the national "critical" list, persons in "restricted activities" must clear through the USES for any job change.

Hetzel's "plan of action" also proposes "encouragement of increased use of handicapped workers" and promises a "complete review of all exemptions to the minimum wartime work week order, on the basis of strict interpretation of the order."

The District WMC also will endeavor, Hetzel said, to reach agreements with employers here to prevent labor "hoarding" and allow "hiring only for replacement purposes" after certain ceilings on employment are reached.

Nationally, regulations designated "minimum provisions" and giving the USES tighter rein over migration and control over hiring of workers in "critical" occupations now will apply uniformly to all areas.

Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt, in a statement, stressed that the minimum provisions do not mean control by the employment service over all hiring, but said that the door is open for the adoption of such a system, or modification thereof, in areas which need tighter controls.

Plan to Cure Water Dept. Ills Offered

Higher Pay Ratings, Personnel Changes Among Committee's 19 Suggestions

Nineteen recommendations to correct alleged inefficiency and low morale in the District Water Department, including suggestions for higher pay ratings and personnel changes, were delivered yesterday to the Commissioners by a committee of District officials and business leaders.

The committee's action was an outgrowth of a report issued last April by Comptroller General Lindsay Warren containing acrimonious criticism of the Office of the Water Registrar. At that time, Warren charged inefficiency in the office was resulting in revenue loss to the District.

Margin for Error

The report disclosed that the registrar's office is not now making the maximum use of accounting machines with the result that errors have been occurring and the employment of added personnel necessitated.

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech headed the fact-finding group responsible for the 19 recommendations. Chief among the suggestions were:

1. The water registrar be placed directly under supervision of the Assistant Engineer Commissioner of the District to end what was termed the "too heavy amount of supervision."
2. General pay increase be granted not only for meter readers, but for all employees of the registrar's office.
3. That a new registrar who is an accountant be appointed. (Present registrar is Ralph L. Heberd.)
4. That the registrar be directed to make a realignment of the office and to recommend a new setup, with persons to be placed in charge thereof and what he deems a reasonable salary.

Extension of Metering

5. That the registrar cause to be installed as soon as possible meters for all customers now remaining on the flat rate.

6. That the new registrar and the Commissioners consider a change of policy under which the owner of the premises served with water be held responsible for water bills and that water bills be made a lien on the property when bills remain unpaid.

7. That the registrar be directed to take "all reasonable steps" to collect unpaid water bills.

No evidence of Dishonesty

The committee reported that it had found no evidence of dishonesty on the registrar's office. "It said it had not made nor been asked to make audits of the department."

It further reported that the morale of the water staff was low, that meter readers were generally inefficient and generally "not performing an honest day's work" and that the readers were "appalling" underpaid in contrast to wages of comparable workers in private industry.

Besides Keech, others on the committee appointed by the Commissioners which started work July 13 were: District Assessor Edward A. Dent; R. V. L. Wright, an official of the Department of the Interior; Thomas H. Hopper of the Washington Gas Light Co.; and W. L. Jones of the Potomac Electric Power Co. The Commissioners are expected to take action on the report soon.

Repayment Asked For Charwomen

Representative McGeehe (Democrat) of Mississippi yesterday introduced a resolution providing for the reimbursement of 80 charwomen in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, who were overpaid by a clerical error for almost a year and last July were informed that the various amounts would be deducted from their salaries.

The women were erroneously paid 78 cents an hour instead of 65, and the total in many cases was about $100. In August the Treasury Department announced that it would withhold deductions to await congressional action this fall.

"By blood giving within physical ability to give, under painless and harmless methods, we are saving our husbands, brothers, sweethearts, other relatives and friends," Mrs. Bickford said, "and the beloved ones of our friends who make up America."

Washingtonians who have yet to give were urged to visit the center, 51 Louisiana ave. n. w., near Union Station, and learn how simple modern science has made the giving of blood.

There is no pain, no danger of infection and no after effects worth mention, except, perhaps, the warming satisfaction that comes over the individual who knows he or she has made an added personal contribution to the war effort.

Memo On Tomorrow

When the Big Three, President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, and Marshal Stalin hold their long awaited conference, they will find a blueprint for action awaiting them. Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted reformer, who has recently been in retirement working on postwar plans, emerged yesterday with a memo on what the conference should accomplish. At her weekly press conference she distributed copies of her memo.

"I had intended to write this memo in basic English she explained, 'but I found that to do so I would have to eliminate many of my basic phrases, which by now have come to be known as 'DeGoofeyisms'. However, I do want to explain that the memo is entirely based on basic thinking." The full text of the memo follows:

To: President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, Marshal Stalin, From: Henrietta DeGoofey.

Re: Winning the war, establishing permanent peace, organizing postwar world.

This is to advise you that I am not satisfied, and neither is anyone else, with the current state of the world. Something MUST be done about this. Will you please take IMMEDIATE steps to implement the settling of this matter now and forever? Here is my outline for action:

I. How to win the war:

A. Abolish "secret" sessions of United States Senate.
B. Keep all Senators (excepting deaf-mutes) away from battle fronts.

C. Gag the following:

1. All arm chair strategists.
2. All carpers about a Second Front (including Pravda editorialists).
3. All commentators who "reveal" on radio or in press where and when Second Front will be established.

D. Protect fatherhood of America. Keep fathers in the home where they belong; draft the more aggressive mothers.

E. De-emphasize movie stars, night club entertainers, bathing beauties, etc., in connection with war effort.
F. Allocate more authority to mess sergeants and less to generals.

II. How to Establish World Peace:

A. Let the UNCOMMON man write the peace.

B. Establish new Superworld Agency to:

1. Work out plans to end all plans for establishing new agencies.
2. Bring peace and goodwill on earth by:
a. Forbidding all tourist travel between nations for at least 50 years.
b. Abolishing family reunions, political party conventions, conventions, church bazaars, office conferences, cocktail parties, club teas.

c. Promote human privacy by:
(AA) Giving every human being a room of his—or her—own.
(BB) Eliminating street cars, buses, etc., and manufacturing only single seated helicopters.

C. Prohibit growing of chestnut trees and end talk about pulling chestnuts out of fire.

D. Recognize womanhood of world by establishing Advisory Board of Lady Managers of the Superworld Agency whose ADVISORY duties would be:

1. End bribery, graft, gambling, swearing, theft, homicide, immorality, exploitation, extortion, selfishness, etc.
2. Improve parents.
3. Improve teachers.
4. Improve everybody.

(NOTE—The Board would of course act only in an ADVISORY capacity.)

III. How to Rebuild World:

A. Cooperate to coordinate world cooperation.
B. Provide economy of abundance of non-fluctuating, non-priority, non-consumption.

C. Crystallize public opinion.
D. Collaborate with all collaborators.

E. Implement everything that should be implemented.
F. Unify world unity.

Can we do this? We CAN! We MUST! Please issue directive to that effect.

Your Baby and Mine

My Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is so much easier for a parent to slick up Bobby's hair or dig efficiently into Barbara's ears than to allow the children to comb and wash themselves.

Yet, every child must learn to accept some responsibility for his own toileting in order to become progressively more independent of the parent's care. The moment to begin an education for independence is when a child shows an interest in doing for himself.

Obviously, he never seems too young to puddle in the lavatory, making a fine, wet mess of himself, so he should not be discouraged from wielding a wash cloth where it will do the most good. If he stands on a stool or kneels on a chair he can manage this well and we should not expect a perfect job nor discourage him by pointing out his glaring omissions. We can give our fine motherly touches to ears and neck and praise him for his splendid job of washing himself. All the necessities for a growing child's toilet should be within reach of his hand. Some mothers lay out brush, comb, toothbrush and soap on a tray in the bathroom. Others have special hooks which the child can reach and on these he will always find his own wash cloth and towel, his comb and toothbrush.

If one can identify the child's towels and wash cloths with some special mark or red tape or just by color, it prevents children using the parent's or other children's toilet articles. Infections are spread easily by such careless practices.

When the child has been taught the full ceremony of tooth brushing, washing and combing, the finale should be a return of each object to its proper place.

Ceremonies and rituals become so dear to the child that each time the washing and combing should be done in exactly the same order and with the finale the same.

By this method the mother can insure the first step will lead to the last step since children, once started, find satisfaction by fulfilling the ritual.

Each step toward independence is a boon to the busy mother and an unquestioned benefit to the child, who must untie the parental apron strings one by one.

Good Quick Breads

"Quick" is literally the word for good, quick breads says Mrs. Julia Kiene, director of Westinghouse Home Economics Institute. Not only do they take very little time to make, but speed is essential from the time wet ingredients are added to dry ones. Mix them thoroughly, but don't beat. And, unlike making yeast breads, shortening must be melted—that makes the mixing process all the speedier.

Mother of Two Children, Whose Second Marriage To Heavy Drinker Has Cost Her Heavily in Peace Of Mind, Wants to Plan Future While He's at War

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 36. My husband is 38. Both of us had been married before. He was divorced. My first husband died, and I have two children by that marriage. My husband is now away in the service. When he left, it was a great relief. He was a consistent drinker and we quarreled a lot. I think I am safe in saying that all our trouble came from his drinking. When we were first married, sometimes it seemed to affect his mind, for he was abusive and violent and would say terrible things—without provocation. When he had these spells, I would be up with him all night; and I would think, "If I live through this night, there is never going to be another like it." But the next morning he would be sober; and before he left for work I would talk to him and he would sit with tears in his eyes and say he couldn't live without me. And that night he would come home with flowers and candy and promises. But a couple of days later, it would be the same thing over again.

However, after we had been married for some time, these spells got better. He still drank heavily, but I think living with me helped his mental attitude. Before he married me, he always associated with others who drank like himself; whereas the children and I lived very quietly. But living with him was always a strain; it wore me out; although when he was sober we got along very well together and he was always good to the children and the children liked him—and miss him now. He is likable (and lovable) when not drinking to excess; and he is a good provider. I would give anything to live with him if we had peace and harmony and certainty; but I don't want to go back to the kind of life we had together before he went away.

Can anything be done? I would like to know just what to do, and make my adjustments accordingly, before he comes back. If I go one day without writing to him, he thinks it is terrible. So I write him casual letters, like I would anyone else. It is hard to express the endearments I know he wants; because, while on one hand I feel a great tenderness for him, on the other hand I feel a resentment towards him for what I went through while he was home. I am torn between these two feelings. Please advise me.

J. M.

She Fails to See Crux of Problem

DEAR J. M.: The problem of how to deal with your husband certainly should be given serious consideration—now that you are temporarily in a position to objectively weigh all factors in the situation, and let reason (rather than soft sentiment) dictate your decision. However, it seems to me that the question of "What to do?" has graver implications than you realize, apparently. For instance, you seem to be thinking primarily—if not, indeed, entirely—in terms of the worth (if any) of the relationship to yourself, and perhaps also to your husband; i.e., whether it will "break" you in the long run, without having netted you any permanent compensation; or whether in time your stabilizing influence of personality might beget at least partial improvement in your husband's habitual performance, so that life with him might become consistently tolerable (if no bed of roses) at some future day.

But to me, the problem, as described, demands to be solved,—if remedy is possible,—primarily in terms of the children's welfare; not only in the here and now, but also by long-range calculations. The fact that they are NOT his children, yet have been, in the past, defenselessly subjected to the demoralizing repercussions of his violent dipsomaniac disturbances of the family peace, is peculiarly shocking. This aspect of the situation subtly indicts you as being almost unnaturally lacking in instinctive maternal protective concern for them; in failure even to recognize, much less to try to fulfill, your thallemic parental duty to surround them (to the best of your ability) with wholesome influences, contributing to their nervous stability and mental and moral health. You have mentioned, of course, that "he was always good to the children and the children liked him, and miss him now." But anyone who knows children, with their piteous susceptibility to "every wind that blows," for good or ill, in their intimate environment, knows also the sickness of spirit that must inevitably assail children who live in a violence-charged atmosphere—a sickness that not only darkens their lives as children, but also "mines" their personalities with underlying hysterical debilities that may make them psychically crippled adults,—incurably so.

Give First Concern To Children's Welfare with him. And you have witnessed the results and shared in the agonizing consequences. Which ought to persuade you of the urgent importance of saving your children from similar tragedy,—by making plans now, while your mind is clear to make them, that will guarantee the children the most orderly and peaceful existence within your power to provide them, up to the time they attain their majority. If conscience, reason—and the lessons of experience tell you (as I imagine they will) that this can only be done by invoking the strength to live completely apart from your husband, unless he reforms permanently, it and when he returns from war,—then my advice is: Take that course; and waste no more commiseration on your broken dreams,—or his easy tears.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

The lore that has grown up about potatoes is inexhaustible. So are the ways to cook them. Although both white and sweet potatoes originated in Peru, yet the Irish and the French have done much to establish them firmly in the daily diet. Even the way of life for many Americans has been "meat and taters."

This vegetable has worthwhile merits. Under the jacket of potatoes is concealed valuable food stuffs. The War Food Administration has designated the Irish potato for the Victory Food Special, October 21 to November 6, because of an all-time high record crop and the need for conserving part of the crop in home storage.

The fall potato crop alone is estimated at 360 million bushels—73 million bushels over last year's crop, and almost as large as the entire 1942 harvest. This tremendous production means there will be an ample supply to meet all military needs and leave a larger than usual supply for civilians.

So it is a safe bet that potatoes are one of the foods in which we can put dependence for our daily fare. And don't throw up your hands and exclaim, "Oh potatoes will make me fat." Potatoes alone will not add pounds. It's what you eat with them that counts. Their bad reputation, as ruinous to a slyph-like figure, is not fair. Of course, if you pile on the butter or give them a double dose of rich gravy, you will round out the curves. But quantities of butter and cream will also increase potato calories.

when this vegetable is eaten in moderation in a well planned meal, they are NOT fattening food.

Potatoes offer as fine and cheap, a way to get calories as you can find. They are very high in energy-making carbohydrate value. And we must respect them for a fairly good source of vitamin C as well as for vitamin B1, iron, protein and starch. They are also a good source of carotene which the body can change into vitamin A, and they have some sugar. Minerals too are contained in them.

Potatoes should be cooked in a way to get the good from them. Cook them with the skins on if you want to keep the food value. If you must peel them, then peel them with the minerals lie next to the skin. Don't peel potatoes and let them soak before you cook them for that will lose minerals and vitamins.

So pass the spuds and praise them for their food value. And use them wisely when planning a meal. You won't need to repeat the type of dish for many a day if you want to cook them in all the ways possible. French fried, latticed, rice, puffed, baked, chipped, shoe string, ribbons, spirals, straws, country-fried, souffles, baked, used in salads, made into pancakes, soup, chowder, baked and made into candy are to mention some of the general ways of preparation.

Let's be more specific and consider some of the ways to cook them. You can start the day off by serving potato pancakes. They will fortify one with energy to combat the day's duties.

BREAKFAST MENU

Potato pancakes can be used for a lunch dish too as well as for breakfast. The recipe for them follows:

POTATO PANCAKES

Grate raw potatoes to make 2 cupsful. Immediately put the potatoes into 1/4 cup milk to keep them from turning dark. Drain the milk from the potatoes. Add 1 well-beaten egg to the potatoes, then add 2 tablespoons flour and just enough of the milk that was drained off to make a stiff batter. Season with salt.

If used for luncheon dish they may have 1 tablespoon chopped onion and pepper added. Drop by large spoonfuls onto a well-greased frying pan. Cook pancakes until well-browned and crisp. Serve at once.

Get acquainted with the thrifty, savory dish of Stuffed Baked Potatoes. It is a delightful way to serve them and they don't lack eye-appeal.

Following are directions for preparing them:

STUFFED BAKED POTATOES

Scrub uniformly sized potatoes. Wash thoroughly. Dry. If a soft, tender skin rather than a crisp crunchiness is desired, brush well with melted fat. Place the potatoes in a cold oven, bring oven temperature to 450 degrees and bake until potatoes are tender when pinched. The baking time will require about 1 hour for large potatoes. If you want to start the baking in a hot oven, 450 degrees, they will bake more quickly. This will require about 45 minutes, possibly less. When baked, cut the potatoes in half lengthwise. Scoop out inside and mash with butter or margarine, salt, pepper and hot milk. Fill potato shells, sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs and toast under broiler until delicately browned. If you want to add cheese, use 1 tablespoon grated cheese to each half potato and whip into the potatoes before filling shells.

Soup made from potatoes is both delicious and nourishing. This makes a fine dish for school children's lunch. This is the way to make it:

POTATO SOUP

Wash and pare 6 medium sized potatoes, cut into cubes and place in a saucepan with 1 chopped onion. Cover with boiling water.

Extend Your Meat Dishes With Correct Food Values

Grandma planned her meals to please grandpa. Mother took some science in her stride, adopted a meal "pattern" of meat, potatoes, vegetables, salad, dessert, beverage. Today we follow the nutrition standard and plan for protein, carbohydrates, minerals and vitamins.

Sensible of us to have learned to plan meals around the meat course, for now we know the importance of protein of which meat is the most popular dependable source. Protein is the body-building material which maintains, repairs, renews the tissues, muscles and cells. Because of its high-quality protein, meat is accepted by meal-planners as man's outstanding protein food. Meat is complete protein—contains all the essential amino acids ("body building-blocks")—as opposed to the incomplete protein of some sources.

Today it's ration-right and fair-sharing to extend meat to have it go round the table. Cheese, poultry, eggs and fish are complete protein foods. Remember that complete protein helps your body utilize the incomplete proteins provided by plentiful sources.

Watch Protein Values

When you extend your meat and high-protein foods, watch your food values. For instance, a half pound of beef contains 60.78 grams of complete high-quality meat protein. To equal this amount in other foods you need: 2 quarts of milk or 5 eggs; 7 1/2 ounces of American or 8 ounces of Swiss cheese; 11 ounces of kidney beans or 9 ounces of split peas. You haven't obtained your protein requirements if you've "overstretched!" And it's

Scalloped potatoes when done up in the a la King style are a worthwhile variance in the potato lineup. This is the way to make this casserole:

Luncheon Tomorrow

A perfect example of what organized womanhood can... and always will... accomplish for "things vital" is demonstrated by the fact that reservations—1050 strong—are already sold out for the largest civic luncheon to be sponsored this season in the interests of Community War Fund tomorrow at 1 p. m. in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

The luncheon, which presents Walter Lippmann as guest speaker, had the wholehearted support of women's clubs throughout Washington and its suburbs. The advance closing of reservations is their complete testimonial for the great cause Community War Fund represents. That cause is the collecting of dollars this month for the USO and other war hospitality, United Nations War Relief and local community welfare to the tune of $4,800,000.

Did You Know That...

The Girl Home Makers Committee of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution has adopted a Victory menu contest as its current national nutrition project. This contest will be based upon war standards of nutrition. Contestants will prepare a breakfast, luncheon and dinner menu, with accompanying short stories giving reasons for selections. An actual luncheon must be served

It's About Time

Grooming on Trial

By Margaret George

EVERY DAY of your life you're on trial, whether you're aware of it or not. You are tried by hundreds of pairs of eyes—on streets, in restaurants, on the streets. It's a quick examination but a ruthless one. And the things that condemn you may even seem like minor offenses. But those eyes mentally charge you with negligence. We've made a brief survey and have uncovered the six most common sins against the public eye. Each of them is in itself a minor one, but added together they present a pretty distasteful array. Have a look at the record and decide whether you should plead guilty or not.

Lips:

It's the easiest thing in the world to smear lipstick on your teeth. Particularly when you apply it haphazardly and so thickly you could cut it with a knife. We grant that many lipsticks smell good enough to eat, but don't look like you've been experimenting in public.

Best way to guarantee a smooth lip rouging job is to use a lip brush. And go easy on the lipstick—keep it natural-looking within the boundaries of your own lips. Cupid-bows and flaming scars are out.

Hair:

Little white flecks resting cozily on your collar and shoulders? If

It's a chronic condition, better see a scalp specialist—and keep a whisk broom handy. Majority of dandruff cases, though, are the result of improper shampooing. Soap is left in the hair. Washington water is very hard and you've got to use a good liquid shampoo, and rinse thoroughly, very thoroughly. There are several soapless shampoos available. You might try one if you find that the dandruff gremlins are over-active.

Legs:

Now that it's too cold for bottled stockings, the old seam-twister problem is back again. Worse than ever now. Because silks and nylons are just about gone, and even the best rayons have a tendency to bag. Round garters (even if you can find them) don't work for rayons—a good adjustable garter belt is the only answer. And the new ones with their part-elastic garters serve the purpose.

Hats:

Better to yank off the veil than to wear it all limp and bedraggled. Better to wear no hat at all than one that's shapeless and soiled. Veils should be pressed (lukewarm iron) often, particularly in wintertime when they're exposed to wet weather. You can get hats cleaned and reblocked for not much money.

Hands:

Of all the obvious crimes against grooming, chipped nail polish is the most common. If your hands are busy at typewriters, filing cabinets, household duties, it is difficult to keep them looking trim. Using a base coat over your freshly-applied polish is a big help in keeping your nails unchipped.

If you find that, in spite of good intentions, your nails are being neglected, you'd better use a natural polish—if it chips it isn't as obvious. All defendants in the case of the public eye versus grooming are requested to take stock of the evidence against them. The case rests.

AWHRC Members Buy Ambulance For Use Here

Two Washington matrons are in New York this week on a shopping tour.

But the pursuit of their purchases takes them not along the fashionable shopping district of Fifth Avenue. Instead they are winding their way through the West Side "motor row," where they intend to select one streamlined ambulance, fully equipped, and one station wagon, capable of being converted into a mobile canteen. The ladies in question are Maj. Dorothy Lee Ward and Mrs. Marsden Perry of the American Women's Hospitals Reserve Corps, and they are buying the motors with their own funds for presentation to the motor transport division of the corps.

Among members of the corps who have recently entertained convalescent officers from service hospitals at their homes are Sgt. Katherine Byron and Lieut. Ethel Gearhart. On Sunday evening Maj. R. Kemp Slaughter is lending his apartment to a trio of AWHRC hostesses who will entertain a large group of guests from Walter Reed Hospital.

Bowles Family Forms Dirt Farmers Clan

Wife of OPA Official Here on Visit Fights Inflation on Home Front

By Martha Rhyné

"Our hired man went off to the wars—at least, he took a job in a war plant. And now the Bowles family is on its own as a farming clan." The wife of OPA's general manager, Chester Bowles, was talking on her favorite subject. She's here on a brief visit with her husband at his Wardman Park apartment.

The question of whether or not the Bowleses will move to Washington from their Connecticut farm near Essex has furrowed the Bowleses' brows since midsummer, when Mr. Bowles took his over-all job, becoming her apparent to the gigantic task of OPA leadership should Prentiss Brown resign. So Mr. Bowles' Washington stay looms long and the family doesn't take to separation.

Unconsciously, Mrs. Bowles leads into the argument. At home, there are several acres of farm land, including a hay lot, pasture, garden spot, and wooded area. There is a cow, which supplies the Bowles family and some of their neighbors with milk—there are 150 chickens—and there were two pigs—now sausage and ham.

And there's the small town of Essex nearby, where Cynthia attends the second grade in school. Sally goes to kindergarten. Mrs. Bowles is president of the school board, and only after home duties became too pressing did she resign a big job as member of the Connecticut War Council. While her husband was State Director of OPA she was somewhat of an authority on price control, too, and did her bit toward helping housewives understand and cooperate with the program.

Women of Nation Must Fight Inflation

She is qualified as a housewife and mother to fight the home-front war against inflation. And she'd like to see all homemakers who are bound to stay home and keep a family intact, wage war against outrageous prices and ceiling violations. She's much encouraged because her husband tells her that complaints as to violations of price ceilings have increased fourfold, indicating that women over the Nation are becoming price-ceiling conscious. "This consciousness alone," said Mrs. Bowles, "can fight inflation—and the women of the Nation are just the ones who can win that battle."

Chester, Jr., 15, is in Pomfret School in Connecticut and Barbara, 16, is in New York at the Brearley School. Cynthia, 7, Sally, 5, and Sam, 4, are all at home helping with the farm chores—and they have so much fun that Mrs. Bowles just hasn't the heart to bring them to a crowded city.

Discovering Washington By Street Car

Up every day at 6 with an unending list of daily duties, Dorothy Bowles, a Vassar graduate and social service worker of many years' experience, finds keeping house a full-time job, and an important one.

She's glad of the excuse to visit in Washington for a few days for it's a wonderful vacation. And on this, her second visit to the Capital, she's making her way around by streetcar and bus.

"My husband says you can't run everything from Washington," she consoled herself when speaking of the little time they could be together now. "So we're trying to arrange things so he can be home in Essex—3000 population—once a month. Then he can see the price administration cause from the other side of the fence."

Tries on Cap: Can't Wear It Yet

Miss Ellen Hershey, above, daughter of Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, head of the selective service and Mrs. Hershey tries on one of the caps that will be awarded to the graduating class of Jango Junior Nursing Aides, in a ceremony this evening at 8:30 at the District Medical Society Building. Though Ellen will not graduate with her class, she will receive "honorable mention," because, instead of completing her nursing course this summer, she took over a month off to stay at home and nurse her own sick mother. However, some of these days she will proudly wear one of those caps which indicate that a Jango has completed 132 hours of nursing classes and 200 hours of duty on the floor of Doctor's Hospital.

Wedding bells continue to ring with persistency this autumn as Washington couples set a new record in the marriage mart. Now on a brief wedding trip are Lieut. About Washington . . .

CAPITAL RUMOR has it that the retiring Argentine Ambassador Felipe Esplil is not the only attractive envoy who will be leaving Washington soon. Not yet ready for official announcement is the report that the Dominican Minister, Dr. J. M. Troncoso, will also be headed homeward this season. He is slated for an even higher post in his country's government.

Son of the former President of the Dominican Republic, who is now president of the Senate, Envoy Troncoso the dapper Dr. Troncoso and his lovely wife came here a couple of years ago . . . following the extremely popular Pastoriza family. But the newcomers weren't long in making their way here. Both speak English fluently and both have winning smiles that need no interpreter for any tongue.

Although the Ambassador and his wife have a host of friends here, they make no bones about their longing to return to their native Santo Domingo—or rather Ciudad Trujillo as it is now called—the oldest city in the Western Hemisphere. The section in which they live is called Troncoso Town, so named after the elder Troncoso who purchased a large tract of ground there before he became his country's President, and gave each of his six sons a lot with the provision that they would build homes there as soon as possible.

OF COURSE I can't even imagine Washington without the Esplils. For a decade they've been as much an accepted part of the Nation's Capital as the diplomatic "blue book" and the D. C. Social Register. Somehow I never did believe reports circulating wildly the past year that the suave and elegant Argentine envoy was on the verge of being recalled. It seemed incredible . . . since he had been here long enough to be outranked by only one envoy, the Peruvian Ambassador, and has long known the ins and outs of the World Capital better than most native Washingtonians.

A self-confessed "diplomat by accident" Senor Esplil was educated to be a lawyer, but before he knew it, he was drafted for his country's foreign service and was on his way to Washington—that was in 1919—to serve as First Secretary until 1928. At least one time in his career he made a very definite effort to retire from diplomacy. While serving as Argentine Minister at The Hague in 1929, he resigned . . . but in the next year he was back in a post as Minister to Denmark.

NOT LONG AFTER returning to Washington he began paying court to the highly popular Courtney Letts Stillwell Borden, and a flock of Washington pretties who had set their caps for the town's most eligible bachelor wailed and quietly gnashed their teeth when the two were married.

An exceptionally clever hostess, Senora de Esplil has made her home at 1600 New Hampshire Avenue one of Washington's smartest gathering places. Back in those half-forgotten days when the British Embassy Senora de Esplil rode the crest of the Capital's social wave, the Argentine Embassy floated along as a close second. Yet Senora de Esplil has managed to turn her time and attention to other pursuits besides those strictly social.

At every congressional opening or important session the past five years, she could be seen occupying a front row seat in the diplomatic section. Employees at the Congressional Library say she has spent more time doing research there than all the other diplomatic hostesses put together. She has also found time to get in the daily two-mile walk that keeps her trim; put in appearance at all important public functions where the wife of the Argentine Ambassador would be expected; and also to keep her wardrobe up to the minute and in such good taste that she was named one of the 10 best-dressed women in America some time ago.

An indication of the success with which she has dealt with the press in the 10 years was the tea yesterday afternoon at which she was honor guest, and members of the American Newspaper Club were hostesses. Just another on the long list of farewell fetes planned in honor of a departing diplomatic chataleine, for whom there cannot be an equally successful successor.

Miss Mary Lord Andrews Is Engaged to Lieut. Coppedge

Member of Old Washington Family to Be Wed In November to Naval Officer

Capt. Atherton Macdonald, USN, and Mrs. Macdonald announce the engagement of Mrs. Macdonald's daughter, Mary Lord Andrews, to Lieut. Thomas Nelson Coppedge, Jr., USN, son of Dr. and Mrs. T. N. Coppedge of Memphis, Tenn.

Miss Andrews is the daughter of the late Eliphale Fraser Andrews, Jr., and the granddaughter of the late Mr. Andrews, noted artist, founder of the Corcoran School of Art and first director of the Corcoran Art Gallery. The bride-elect's grandmother, the late Mrs. Marietta Corcoran Minnegrode Andrews, was a well-known artist and writer. On her maternal side Miss Andrews is the granddaughter of the late Col. Charles Cowles Tucker, prominent Washington attorney, and the late Mrs. Tucker, both of whom lost their lives in the Knickerbocker Theater disaster in 1922. Both families are prominent in Virginia.

A graduate of Holton Arms School in 1940, Miss Andrews attended St. Agnes' School in Alexandria. She was presented to society at a garden party in June, 1940, at Vauxcluse, the Andrews' family home at Seminary Hill, Alexandria, where she was born. She is a member of the Junior League and has worked ardently for two years as a Nurses Aide in the Red Cross. She has been especially interested in entertainment projects of the Navy League.

Lieutenant Coppedge is the grandson of the late William Joseph Coppedge of Stanton, Tenn., and Mrs. Coppedge, and of John Francis Davis and the late Mrs. Davis of Memphis and Kansas City. He attended the Pentecost-Garrison School for Boys at Memphis, the McCall Preparatory School at Chattanooga, and the Choate School in Connecticut and was graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis in the 1941 class. He is a member of Delta Sigma, national preparatory school fraternity, the Memphis Yuletide Revelers and the Army and Navy Club in Washington.

Following his graduation from Annapolis the prospective bridegroom had foreign duty for a year and a half. After his detachment he came to Washington for a special course and is now back on sea duty.

The wedding is expected to take place in early November, but the date is contingent on Lieutenant Coppedge's orders. The ceremony probably will be held in the chapel on the Vauxcluse estate with a reception following at the house.

Senator's Daughter To Make Home Here

Mrs. Arthur J. Peavey, Jr., and her children, John and Betty Anne, have arrived from Twin Falls, Idaho, to make their home with her father, Senator John Thomas of Idaho. They will occupy a home in Spring Valley at 4733 Woodway Lane, where Mrs. Peavey will be her father's hostess.

Mrs. Peavey is the widow of Arthur J. Peavey, Jr., and since his death has made her home in Idaho.

Silverman-Weiner Wedding In Texas

Pfc. and Mrs. Harold Silverman, whose marriage took place recently in Wichita Falls, Tex., are now temporarily making their home in Salt Lake City.

The bride is the former Miss Anita Weiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Weiner of Alexandria. Mr. Silverman who is with the Air Corps, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Silverman of Brooklyn.

Argentine Official Here For Study

Abraham Scheps, assistant manager of the Buenos Aires Chamber of Commerce and chief of its economic studies, has come to this country to spend three months at the invitation of the State Department and is now in Washington. He is accompanied by Senora de Scheps, the former Senorita Paulina Heller, an art teacher in Buenos Aires.

Senor Scheps is here to study custom unions organizations at the Pan American Union, the States Department, and several institutes of higher economic studies. He will also inspect the organizations of the various chambers of commerce in Washington, New York, Chicago, San Francisco and New Orleans. A primary reason for his visit, however, is in connection with the new Pan American Customs Union, discussed at the conference of American Associations of Commerce and Production in Montevideo in 1941, and now unanimously approved as a project.

The Pan American Customs Union is comparable in its scope to the Postal Union. It would provide free admittance for the productions of the different countries for the consumption of the others. "Its policy of free intercourse of raw materials is strictly in accordance with the principles of the Atlantic Charter," Senor Scheps explained in a recent interview at the Pan American Union.

Senora de Scheps will take advantage of the opportunity while in this country to visit art schools.

Relief Agencies To Join Hands

When a Washington family takes in new members the housing problem is likely to become acute.

with the United War Relief Center expanding its organization to include all 12 of the foreign war relief committees which are now member agencies of the Community War Fund, the need for a new home looks as large as it might in any other "family."

Dr. Paul F. Douglas, who also headed the former four-agency center, has been elected chairman of the new organization. Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, representing the French Relief Fund, Inc., and Mme. Loudon, of the Queen Wilhelmina Fund, have accepted office as vice chairmen. Col. Julius L. Peyer was elected advisory counsel, and Achilles Catsonis secretary.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, chairman of the Russian War Relief, is taking leadership in scouring the town for a suitable headquarters. In the meantime all who can will take desk space in the present headquarters at 1529 Connecticut ave.

Assisting Wilson Compton, United China Relief Committee head, in drawing up the "articles of association" for the cooperative venture are Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and Mrs. Taylor.

ALL'S POPPING ON THE SUB-URBAN FRONT, blanketed for some time under the pleasure driving ban. The Nightingale will reopen tomorrow with a 10-man band.
This brings the countryside nitery picture almost back to a prewar status since River Bend and La Congo came back into circulation a few weeks ago while Crossroads has always stuck to its guns even when buses were the only legal customer transportation to its doorstep.
Louis Betancourt's rumba band will wind up at La Congo next Wednesday, succeeded by Dave Crocker, whose crew played in the Dubonnet Room for many months.

Two hearts with but a single thought—of deep sea fishing—these of Adrian Rollini and Johnny Longo, owner of El Patio. They'll be off to the Florida Keys and bal-con with tarpon and sailfish as soon as Rollini finishes his El Patio run.

Lounge Riviera was telling us that Sheila Barrett was in a state of blank fury about a male who grabbed a cab from her at the Union Station when Pianist Tommy Johnson broke in with, "Foey on that chivalry stuff. I wouldn't give my seat to a woman on a street car unless she was 100 years old and had a birth certificate to prove it."
P.S. Wait'll we meet Tommy on a street car. He'll get up or rate a wound medal.

WE VOWED never to mention
"Pistol Packin' Mamma" again. But the music makers do the darnedest things with this boss opera tanga-

ma. It'll kill you to hear Chago
Rodriguez singing it with a deep Mexican accent at Treasure Island
... Denny Becker's Band in the Victory Room trims it up with a horse and pistols. ... Kay Arden of the Neptune Room has made it into a piano solo with almost machine gun rat-a-tats. ... Over at Kavakos Grill the entire floor show comes out shooting in "Pistol Packin' Mamma." Makes you feel as though you're in the middle of the capture of Salerno.

Carlos Molina's nationally noted band will return to Del Rio on Tuesday when Del Courtney's orchestra takes off for Chicago's Black Hawk Inn.

House Defers Action on Service Dependents in Rising Tide of Higher Pay

The House yesterday debated increased payments to servicemen's dependents for nearly three hours, but postponed a decision until Monday as a rising tide of sentiment for increased benefits threatened to override the committee bill.

Chairman May and other ranking military committee members opposed any increase over the House committee scale but apparently their only chance of defeating the Sadowski amendment was procedure making a roll call unlikely.

Leaders privately conceded the Sadowski amendment might succeed on a record vote, but under House procedure there will be no record vote unless Sadowski wins on a teller count or rising vote.

Whether the Sadowski amendment stands or falls, there appeared no doubt the House would raise benefits to at least the level of the Senate bill—$50 for the wife, (as at present); $30 for the first child, (compared with $25 in the House bill); and $20 for each additional child. The House bill provides $20 for the second child and $15 for each additional child. The Sadowski amendment scale: $55 for the wife; $35 for the first child; and $30 for each additional child. In a House speech, Sadowski said this was the minimum on which a soldier's family could be held together. Sadowski submitted this budget for a soldier's family of three, (wife and two children):

Food (17 cents each a meal)	49.90
Clothing	15.00
Gas, electricity, heat, etc.	8.50
House supplies and repairs	4.00
Medical care and medicine	10.00
Hair cuts and personal hygiene for children	3.00
Movie once a month and minimum recreation	3.00
Bus and other transportation	4.00
Miscellaneous	1.60
Total	$120.00

May told the House that his committee's more modest scale was based on a careful study of living costs, and was liberal compared with that of other nations.
